Drive on Smolensk Wins New Villages

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

LONDON, Thursday, March 25.—Red Army troops fighting stubborn battles through long-established and strong German fortifications on the western front captured several more inhabited points on Wednesday in a continuing advance on the big Nazi base of Smolensk, Moscow announced today.

It Isn't So Bad, Meat Rationing Analysis Shows

Comes Monday and Atlanta's housewives go into the red (stamp-wise, at least). New headcaches and more counting-on-fingers are bound to result, but their outlook yesterday, after viewing OPA's red-stamp-point-value table, was pretty cheerful.

The average point value of all meats, lumping everything from bacon rind (one point) to dried beef, which tops the list with a 12-point value, is six points per pound. The most popular cuts, however, average eight points per pound; beefsteak (except boned sirloin, which is nine), veal loin chops, center pork chops, loin lamb chops, fresh or cured sliced ham and either sliced or slab bacon, with the rind off, are all eight.

Patton Troops Stop Enemy as U. S. Guns Blast at Key Town

By DANIEL DE LUCE.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, March 24.—(AP)—Strong Axis counterattacks were reported today to have blunted British frontal assaults on the Mareth Line, but another Eighth Army column gained two miles in its threat to encircle the Germans, and U. S. troops already have begun shelling Mezzouna, only 22 miles from the enemy's coastal road far above the Mareth pocket.

(Prime Minister Churchill told the house of commons this morning that Axis counterattacks largely had erased the British breach in the Mareth line. Informed quarters did not know whether his information superseded today's Allied communique, which did not mention any reverses.)

An Allied communique said the Eighth Army had "successfully repulsed enemy counterattacks" in the Mareth village area of the Axis fortified line 20 miles below Gabes, and that prisoners now totalled 2,000.

Enemy counterattacks also were beaten off by American troops east of El Guejar, the southernmost of two drives by General Patton's forces aimed at surrounding Marshal Rommel's army.

(A German radio commentary recorded by the Associated Press said German counterattacks had won the "first line of strongpoints" lost to the British, but warned that the Axis position still was "not satisfactory" and that the fighting was still in full swing.)

A storm of enemy counterattacks beat against the tenacious British infantry clinging to a narrow shellhorn salient on the coastal end of the Mareth line, and the immediate outcome of the Allied offensive appeared to hang on the fighting in this new "devil's cauldron."

For more than 36 hours Rommel struck back at this wedge driven by General Montgomery's shock troops. German grenadiers and tanks, as well as the best of Italian soldiers in Africa, fought to wipe out British weekend gains.

Axis artillery concentrated its fire on the Wadi Zigzaou, which British guns and armored vehicles must cross if the salient is to be widened and deepened.

This is in the area between Mareth and Zarat and as yet Montgomery has not been able to employ his armor there.

Rommel, however, was reported to have sent his Nazi tanks against British infantrymen who got beyond the wadi Sunday.

Hill of Bombs.
Allied airmen of the western desert force, however, dumped thousands of pounds of bombs on the Axis positions in the narrow area, particularly around Zarat, five miles northeast of Mareth. Axis artillery concentrated its fire on the Wadi Zigzaou, which British guns and armored vehicles must cross if the salient is to be widened and deepened.

The British gained two miles in their wide flanking movement to the rear of the fortified line. They reached a point eight miles below El Hamma, a strategic road junction only 20 miles west of Gabes, Rommel's coastal supply depot.

The two American columns under General George S. Patton Jr. also imperiled Rommel's position, although the enemy was stiffening against the two U. S. drives and calling up squadrons of Stuka dive bombers.

Georgia Ham From Asa Candler Wings Its Way to Churchill

By AL SHARP.

Take a ham from a Georgia hog, mix well with a phony phone call, the international situation, Royal Air Force ferry command and a transatlantic bomber flight. That's the recipe for learning that Winston Churchill probably is lunching on Georgia ham today.

It's a roundabout way of reporting that Asa G. Candler Jr., prominent Atlantian, sent to 10 Downing street a 36-pound ham—one of the famous ones he cures himself. But it's that type of story, as you can see from the way Candler tells it.

"I'll have to start at the beginning," he said. "You have to know the whole story to appreciate it."

Last October Captain E. W. Hightower, who used to be my pilot, came through here with Commander Newton, head of the RAF ferry command. They stayed at our place and we had a ham. Commander Newton went wild about it.

"Just before they left on a flying mission the phone rang. A sweet voice asked if I was Asa G. Candler and said London was calling."

"Who's calling me from London?" I asked.

"Winston Churchill," was her reply.

"Then there was the usual talking back and forth just as they do on those calls. Then this voice identified itself in a British accent as Winston Churchill."

"I've heard about your famous hams," the man said, "and I wonder if you would send me one."

"Sure, I'll send you one—be glad to," I replied.

"Then Commander Newton laughed. He explained that he did want to take Churchill one if I would send it. He certainly took me in, all right. I've heard Churchill talk over the radio many times and Newton sounded just like him."

"I didn't hear any more about the idea until last week. Since last October, Captain W. C. Siple has taken over the Ferry Command. He knew all about the joke they played on me. So when he and Hightower and their crew stopped here last week, we had another ham."

"Siple brought up the joke and said he was going to see that Churchill got a ham from a hog raised practically in the city of Atlanta. I got the mate to the one we ate—it's a 36-pound ham—and sent it."

"It was headed straight to 10 Downing street, because Siple said he wasn't going to trust any one with such a ham. It left last Saturday and I expect Churchill got it today or before, because it went by bomber to Britain from Canada on one of the Ferry Command's flights."

"I sent a letter of instructions with the ham on how it should be cooked. Thought maybe they wouldn't cook it right."

"I hope he gives some of it to King George. No, I didn't tell him to do that. No, I wouldn't go that far."

"But I do want that Atlanta ham to get a royal reception. It's a real ham, all right."

80 Axis Planes Shot Down to Five for U. S.

By GLADWIN HILL.

UNITED STATES EIGHTH AIR FORCE HEADQUARTERS IN ENGLAND, March 24.—(AP)—American Flying Fortresses and Liberators destroyed 80 Axis planes at the cost of five, probably shot down another 29 and damaged 32 others in particularly effective bombing attacks on Vegesack near Bremen last Friday and Wilhelmshaven Monday.

The aggressive Texan who commands the Eighth United States Air Force, Major General Ira C. Eaker, announced these figures today and emphasized they were but a sample of things in store for Germany.

The official box score on the aerial combats incidental to the destruction heaped on the submarine bases and shipyards:

	De. Prob. Dam. U. S.	Axis Destroyed	Axis Damaged	Axis Losses
Vegesack	52	20	25	1
Wilhelmshaven	28	9	9	3
Totals	80	29	32	5

16-to-1 Ratio.

The 16-to-1 or better ratio of killing off Axis fighters illustrated the economy of the American bombing as outlined by the general at a press conference today.

"American bombers can go to any target in Germany and beat off fighters on their way there and on the way back," he said. "I anticipate that we will have a big enough force by midsummer so we won't give a damn whether they know we are coming or not. The more they put up, the more we'll knock down."

He declared that the raid on Vegesack, an industrial waterfront center near Bremen, marked the end of the experimental stage of high-altitude precision bombings by daylight and that the United States assaults on the German war potential would be stepped up.

Night Bombing.
Moreover, he said the heavyweights were being equipped for night bombings to join the saturation attacks of the RAF. New bombers coming off United States production lines shortly will be "bigger and faster and carry three to four times the bomb load and they will be better defensively," Eaker said.

The Americans have conducted 51 operations against Hitler's continental establishments and destroyed 356 Axis planes against the loss of 90 bombers, Eaker said, adding that this proved that American daylight bombing tactics were practical and could be pursued well within the reasonably expected ratio of losses and gains.

150 Families Flee Homes As Mine 'Settles'

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 24.—(AP) A new $400,000 high school and some 150 homes in a six-block area rocked and trembled and began to disintegrate in a rumbling mine subsidence "pull" that threatened to draw a whole section of this Pennsylvania anthracite mining town into the earth tonight.

The Red Cross disaster service moved into a section of the No. 3 mine of the Pagnotti enterprises which underlies the section were ordered to leave the shaft by the nearest exit.

The subsidence began at 7:30 p. m. and was still "pulling" hours afterward.

Cracks appeared in the walls of the high school and plaster crumbled to the floor. Sixty-five members of the high school band who were practicing in the school when the subsidence began were evacuated.

Crevasse, some as wide as two feet, spread out like a spider web from the high school, which was reported to be directly over the center of the "pull." A witness said he saw a crack a foot wide in the basement floor of the school.

BRITISH RAID FAILS.
LONDON, March 24.—(AP)—The German-controlled Oslo radio reported today that a group of saboteurs had landed on the Norwegian coast Monday night by British motorboats but had been spotted at once by German troops and driven off with sharp losses.

Costly Studio Fire Attracts Thousands

Thousands of Atlantans watched firemen battle a spectacular fire which broke out in the H. and W. photographic studio at 30 Broad street yesterday at 1:15 p. m.

Attracted to the downtown blaze by the siren-accompanied rush of 13 fire engines, office workers spent part of their lunch hour watching firemen gain control of the flames before they spread to adjoining buildings. The fire lasted about 30 minutes.

Those who arrived early saw flames flash 15 and 20 feet from windows on the upper two stories of the four-story building. Firemen fighting to get heavy hoses up the long ladders were endangered by smoke, which blinded them, and the lashing streams of water from other hoses.

Third Floor Origin.
The two-alarm fire started on the third floor, which is used as a storage room by the H. and W. Studios, Chief C. C. Styron of the fire department said. D. T. Hunt, owner of the studios, said the fire spread from the pastboard packing boxes to some old film, which burned quickly.

Damage to materials stored in the rooms amounted to several hundred dollars, Hunt said, adding that he would not attempt to estimate the water damage to the second floor, part of the studios, and the first floor, occupied by Robinson's Nuttery.

The stock in the first-floor store was heavily hit by water, which cascaded down the stairs and poured through the ceiling.

Damage Uncounted.
Chief Styron said there was no way for him to estimate the damage to the building. The loss will amount to several thousands of dollars, observers estimated.

Fireman J. P. Clark, of No. 6 fire hall, was the only person reported injured. He stuck a nail in his foot while fighting the blaze.

The building originally was used by The Atlanta Constitution more than 50 years ago.

Red Cross Fund At $220,692 As Nurse Appeals

While a packed house of volunteer workers heard gripping firsthand stories of what miracles of humanity each dollar would work, reports rolled in yesterday sending subscriptions so far in the Greater Atlanta war fund campaign of the Red Cross to a three-day total of $220,691.65.

The general canvass group of the drive, largest division of all and composed to a large extent of women from Fulton, DeKalb and Rockdale counties, heard eyewitness accounts of valiant Red Cross activities in the war zones from Lieutenant Leona Gastinger, Army nurse who saw the fall of Bataan and Corregidor, and Albert Evans, Red Cross field director, who recently returned to the United States.

Nazi Bombers Pound Scotland as Toll in English Town Grows

LONDON, Thursday, March 25.—(AP)—For the first time in weeks Nazi bombers raided Scotland early today after a raid Wednesday on a southeastern English town where more than 12 persons were killed.

Incendiaries were dropped in southeastern Scotland as the German bombers cut through intense antiaircraft fire toward central Scotland.

In the southeastern English town the death toll was reported rising as more victims were being discovered in the debris of flattened buildings, homes and a school.

Residents said the number of injured was "considerable," and that the short attack by more than a dozen raiders was "one of the heaviest the town has suffered."

Allied fighters struck at railway communications in France during the day and at dusk Mosquito bombers, Britain's fastest bombers, hammered railway targets in northwest Germany.

One fighter is missing, a communiqué said.

In the raid on England, a bomb demolished a school only seconds after the 300 pupils had been sent to shelters.

Fire-fighting units from neighboring cities were called to control a number of large fires.

A workshop was hit directly, with a large number of casualties. Two of the raiders were destroyed, one by fighter planes and one by antiaircraft fire, and a third German plane was destroyed by RAF fighters off the northeast coast of Scotland this afternoon.

The sweeps over France by Allied craft today followed night attacks by RAF fighters over northwest Germany and occupied territory to hammer at communications, and at least eight locomotives were reported shot up. One British plane was lost.

International News Service War Correspondent

AN ADVANCE ALLIED AIR BASE IN NORTH AFRICA. March 24.—(INS)—A pair of old, muddy Army pants has brought new friends and the flavor of the Arabian Nights into the olive drab world of the American Air Corps.

myself and four members of the American Air Corps. My companions are Colonel William Westlake, of Chicago; Captain Philip W. Porter, of Cleveland; Lieutenant Uriel D'Acosta, of Houston and Lieutenant George (Admiral) Byrd, of Atlanta, Ga.

Lieutenant Byrd.

The new friends are the Caid Bendall, chief Arab magistrate and dignitary of the province which includes this Allied air base, and his wife, Madame Bendall.

Taken Into Home. They have taken us into their home and made us welcome.

Now to the immense delight of all of us at the Caid's insistence we have just assisted in the official refounding of the "Garden of Allah." But that's another story.

From the moment Americans arrived in this vicinity and the air base grew to include his native village, the Caid, a jolly, roly-poly man now crowding 70, has been an important, powerful and staunch ally.

As an officer in the French Army, the Caid fought side-by-side with American troops in World War I.

"The boche—no good," is one of the few English phrases used by this urbane and widely traveled man. A Knight of the Legion of Honor, the Caid is entitled to wear 19 ribbons and decorations for his 25 years in the French Army, which includes service in the Boxer Rebellion.

Great Influence. A man of great influence among his own people, Monsieur Bendall has rendered us important service of his chosen rule of unofficial liaison officer.

No sooner had Americans arrived here than the Caid gave a great ceremonial dinner, whose 13-course delicacies are still the topic of conversation among the officers invited to attend.

My inclusion in the Bendall circle can be laid directly to the old G. I. pants I wear as one means of keeping warm while I get around the countryside in open jeeps and trucks.

The breeches sent the Caid into gales of laughter when we first met as I strolled down the main street of the village with Captain Porter, an old friend of M. Bengali.

Pants Prove Sensation.

The Caid said an American woman in his village was an event, but one in pants was a sensation. (Alas, there is no doubt about this. I am followed by half the Arab population wherever I go.) So without further ado, he took both Captain Porter and myself off to his home for midmorning coffee and delicious honey cakes.

The Caid briskly led the way in a flowing brown robe, his handsome head wrapped in an immaculate white turban bound with yellow brocade. The captain and I clogged along in our G. I. shoes and overcoats conscious that we cut a very poor sartorial figure by contrast with the Caid.

We came to a deceptively small house, much like any other native stucco house in the village. There was a tiny garden around the front door but we did not enter there. Instead the Caid led the way through a wooden gate to one side. We walked down an unprepossessing alley and suddenly we were in a large immaculate courtyard bright with tiles, around three sides of which is built the Caid's home.

Senegalese Servant.

A Senegalese servant waited in the background to do the Caid's bidding. The bright black eyes of the Caid's youngest daughters ranging in age from six to 12 peered at us shyly as they hid in the background. Only the Caid's handsome son, a boy of 10, came into the drawing room to sit with us.

There was nothing so prosaic as a chair in the drawing room or windows. Light and air came from the great door opening on the courtyard. We sat on banquettes covered in brocade blue and cream velvet that bordered each wall.

A half dozen little bamboo tables just large enough for a tray of coffee were scattered about the room. The Senegalese boy brought in the coffee in a silver pot on a magnificent and antique copper tray. We drank our coffee from little gold lacquered cups, and ate the native honey cakes with great enjoyment.

It was then that the Caid still chuckling over my pants insisted that Captain Porter bring me back again so that I might be dressed in native Arab robes and have my picture taken more suitable for a woman than khaki breeches.

Robb 'Cutest Thing,' Lieut. Byrd Writes

Inez Robb is the "cutest thing in a WAAC coat, a pair of G. I. trousers and a soldier's helmet," according to word reaching here from the Atlantan in the party of four members of the American Air Corps mentioned in yesterday's dispatch from the INS war correspondent.

Miss Robb is not only "cute," but she has "a grand personality," Lieutenant George Daniel Byrd Jr., nicknamed "Admiral" by his air corps pals at a North African base, wrote to his wife, who is employed in the hospital inspector's office at Lawson General Hospital.

Mrs. Byrd said yesterday that her husband has been in Africa since the first major landing of American troops last November. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George D. Byrd, of North Peachtree road, Chamblee. Lieutenant Byrd received his commission last June, and attended the Officer Training School at Miami Beach, Florida.

He was stationed at Harrisburg, Pa., until he went overseas. He is a photographic and transportation officer.

Byrd is a native of Los Angeles, Cal. He was graduated from Fulton High school and attended Oglethorpe University. Prior to entering the service, he was assistant manager of the Atlanta branch of the Shaw-Walker Company.

His wife lives here with her husband's parents.

New Success Is Chalked Up For Farm Bloc

WASHINGTON, March 24.—(AP) Amid arguments and denials that the legislation would raise retail food costs 7 per cent, the congressional farm bloc chalked up another victory today with house passage of a bill to prohibit the deduction of benefit payments to farmers in determining price ceilings on parity for agricultural products.

The house action, sending the bill to the senate, where similar legislation has been approved, came on a standing vote of 149 to 40.

There was some speculation, however, that a presidential veto was in store for this legislation and for a bill passed by the house last Friday calling for the inclusion of increases in farm labor costs since 1908-14 in calculating parity. This latter bill has been assailed by opponents with the assertion it would bring an increase of 16 per cent in retail food prices.

The assertion that the benefit payment bill would boost food prices about 7 per cent came from Representative Kean, Republican, New Jersey, who said the estimates were made by the Office of Price Administration. In view of the bill passed last Friday Kean contended the nation's food bill will go up $5,000,000,000 if the Steagall bill becomes law.

Kean's fears of higher food prices were discounted by Representative Face, Democrat, Georgia, who declared the "college statisticians" in OPA are "irresponsible" and should "be run out of the government service." No major price increases would result, he said.

"Herd up" that used stove, heater, fur coat, radio, gun, etc., and "corral" cash by advertising them in the Want Ads of The Constitution.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—(AP) Senator Hill, Democrat, Alabama, announced today that Lord Halifax, the British ambassador, will leave April 1 on a visit to the south, arriving at Sheffield, Ala., April 2.

ports were made by Robert Strickland and Donald Oberdorfer.

"If I could just get over to you," pleaded Lieutenant Gastinger, "the barest idea of one small fraction of the good this money will do in relieving human suffering, the money would roll in like a torrent. You see it with your own eyes, as I did, then you can't describe it."

"There are no words, for example, to describe the horror of a bombing raid when one of the hundreds of victims is a day-old baby—and there are no phrases to paint the joy which medical supplies, food, clothing and similar words of encouragement will bring to the soul of a fighter who is half-dead from hunger, privation and weariness."

"There was a time, long ago, when I thought of the Red Cross in terms of nursing, because I was a Red Cross nurse. But the days I spent in the Philippines, on Bataan and Corregidor have shown me the almost limitless expanse of merciful goodness with which the Red Cross blesses those to whom it ministers."

Evans told of the Red Cross in battle and also described its work when pestilence arrived as a by-product of war. He urged his hearers to realize that Americans in America had not yet begun to touch even the edges of sacrifice and to help avoid that dire necessity by aiding the Red Cross now—as an agency which could do much, by its human and spiritual aid to the morale of soldiers and sailors, to bring the war to an end more speedily.

Additional reports on the progress of Greater Atlanta's $600,000 campaign, which is under general chairmanship of W. C. Harris, will be made at meetings to be held Thursday and Friday at 12:30 at the Atlanta Athletic Club.

Thursday's session will bring together the public employees' division, headed by Harry Sommers and E. Al Thorndell; the general employees' division, with H. Carl Wolf and J. C. Malone as chairman and co-chairman; the business division, C. Stuart Broeman, chairman, and Tucker Wayne, co-chairman, and the office building division, led by John O. Chiles, chairman, and T. R. Garlington, co-chairman.

Bainbridge Air Base To Stage War Fund Drive

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION.

BAINBRIDGE, Ga., March 24.—Final plans for the Red Cross war fund drive at the Bainbridge Army Air Field, starting March 29, have been completed, Captain Nathaniel Delue, officer in charge of general arrangements, announced today.

The war fund committee is headed by Colonel Mills S. Savage, commanding officer of the post, as honorary president, with Captain Edward L. Maloney as executive chairman. Contributions from the squadrons will be handled by Captain Alex H. Gay, and Captain Richard May, commandant of cadets, will direct the cadet detachment drive. Special promotions will be under the supervision of Captain Daniel H. Caraker, special services officer, and Captain Bradbury N. Robinson Jr., public relations officer, will direct the drive's publicity.

The committee, selected by the commanding officer, will work in conjunction with Charles M. Schermerhorn, Red Cross field director.

Team captains, with department captains to assist them, have been selected in all the departments of the field where civilians are employed. Captain Delue said, and these workers will accept contributions from civilians on the field. Receptacles labeled "Jar the Japs" have been placed in all the day rooms of the post for voluntary contributions from the enlisted personnel.

INDUCTION FOR NATIONALS.

LONDON, March 24.—(AP)—Effective April 1, Allied nationals of military age—between 18 and 42 years—in this country who have not joined their own national forces within two months will be liable to induction in British forces unless exempted by their governments, the ministry of labor announced today. The order will not apply to United States citizens.

Prompt action is necessary in replying to the attractive offers in the Want Ad pages of The Constitution.

Ramspeck expressed his view on the eve of the opening tomorrow of debate on the tax measure, an issue affecting the pocketbooks of 44,000,000 taxpayers.

Among the tax proposals are the Ruml plan, originated by Beardsley Ruml, New York banker, which would abate 1942 taxes; a modification of the Ruml plan by Representative Carlson, Republican, Kansas, under which persons with taxable income of $20,000 and over would be required to pay taxes on either 1942 or 1943 income, whichever is the larger; the House Ways and Means Committee bill which provides no tax abatement and makes pay-as-you-go optional; and Representative Robertson's (Democrat, Virginia) proposal to abate the 6 per cent normal and 13 per cent first bracket surtax on 1942 income of all taxpayers. All embrace a 50 per cent withholding levy on the taxable portions of wages and salaries.

"I believe the bill will be written on the house floor," Ramspeck said, "and that as it comes out of the house it will not be the Carlson bill, but a middle ground measure between full abatement of a tax year and the Ways and Means Committee bill which provides no abatement at all."

Other forecasts varied. Representative Knutson, Republican, Minnesota, said the Republicans, with the help of about 30 Democrats, would drive the Ruml plan through the house. Representative Disney, Democrat, Oklahoma, predicted passage of the committee measure.

The Democratic leadership is lined up solidly against the Ruml proposal and Republican Leader Martin, of Massachusetts, predicts that the "overwhelming majority" of his party members would support the Carlson bill. The Democrats now have 222 house seats and the Republicans 209.

Carlson told the house today that unless this pay-as-you-go plan was adopted 5,000,000 persons might have to borrow $1,000,000,000 this year to meet their tax bills. He read figures he said were supplied by an official of a New York bank estimating that 50,000 New Yorkers borrowed $10,000,000 to pay their first quarter income tax on March 15, and that 500,000 others throughout the United States borrowed approximately $100,000,000 before March 15 to pay their taxes.

Sales of Seed Potatoes Limited Further by OPA

WASHINGTON, March 24.—(AP) Retail stores, beginning tomorrow, must not sell seed potatoes for any purpose other than planting, under an OPA ruling issued today.

The agency described its action as a "further step in its attack on the black market" in seed potatoes.

Earlier orders had prohibited the sale of seed potatoes—except for planting—at the country shipper and other distributor levels. This ban now is extended to retail sales.

SPECTATORS GAPE—Firemen balancing on long ladders and sometimes hidden from view by smoke made spectators gape. Hitler's Former German People Baker Found Shown Film Of Defenses

NEW YORK, March 24.—(AP)—Adolf Hitler's former baker, who concocted pastries for the Nazi elite guard and Storm Troopers at Hitler's retreat at Berchtesgaden, Germany, has been apprehended by FBI agents as an enemy alien, it was announced today.

E. E. Conroy, special agent in charge of the FBI, said the 40-year-old baker told him he came here from Berchtesgaden in 1937, and had been employed in a well-known West 42d street restaurant. He described in detail to agents banquets he had helped prepare for the Nazis and said he had seen Hitler on several occasions. Conroy said he told agents he refused to serve in the U. S. Army against any Axis power, and had two brothers, one in the German army and the other a German policeman.

German People Shown Film Of Defenses

By The Associated Press.

The German people are now being shown a newsreel of a "modern defense system" of coastal fortifications built up by the Nazi Army in the last two years in southeastern Europe, fortifications manned by "new divisions equipped with new heavy arms," the Berlin radio said last night.

The defense lines extend to Crete and have been under construction since the defeat of the Yugoslavs and Greeks. "New divisions equipped with new heavy arms have only recently been transported to these fronts," said the broadcast, recorded by the Associated Press.

The newsreel shows antitank defenses, camouflaged gun positions and barbed wire entanglements on Crete, which the Nazis won by aerial and sea attack, the broadcast added.

This section of the Nazi-dominated European "fortress" is among those which have been mentioned as possible routes of Allied invasion. Greek Premier Emmanuel Tsouderos, speaking from Cairo in a Greek Independence Day address, declared yesterday that "the day of liberation is not far off" and asserted that "the enemy will be crushed. I have reason to believe that this will happen this year."

The broadcast was recorded by the Federal Communications Commission.

Africa Victory Still Long Way Off Says Davis

Chief of OWI Defends Agency and Discounts Berlin Claims.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—(AP) Director Elmer Davis, of the Office of War Information, said today that the hot and heavy fighting in Tunisia is "still some distance from decision" in every sector.

The public should not indulge in premature enthusiasm over the progress of American forces, he told a press conference, since they are embarked on "only the beginning of what will be a big chore."

Neither, he said, should there be pessimism over Prime Minister Churchill's statement that a German counteroffensive had wiped out part, if not most of the British gains along the Tunisian coast.

"There is nothing decisive in any quarter," the OWI chief said, noting that Axis propaganda was pursuing a cautious line in making any predictions.

Turning to other matters, Davis said German claims of U-boat damage on Allied convoys in recent days have been "as usual, fantastically exaggerated."

"However, a couple of convoys were attacked and suffered some losses. The situation is serious and will remain serious throughout the good weather. Submarine activity undoubtedly will be increased this spring, and so will our antishubmarine measures, but we have a long fight ahead of us."

Davis distributed a statement detailing the extent to which OWI cooperates with the American press, radio and motion pictures to get war information to the people, in reply to charges by Representative Ditter, Republican, Pennsylvania, that OWI is deficient in making use of existing information outlets.

"Congressman Ditter seems to feel there should be no OWI," Davis said. "That is fair enough, if a majority of congress agrees with him, but in the meantime we

Allies Term Axis Defense Miniature of Later Fighting

By DANIEL DELUCE.

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN AFRICA, March 24. (AP)—Allied military opinion holds that the bitter Axis defense of eastern Tunisia is a miniature model of how Germany one day will be compelled to fight in Europe.

Numerically inferior in troops and planes, Marshal Erwin Rommel, aside from his usually futile tank countercharges, has banked on the defensive power of mine fields, concentrated antiaircraft fire and heavy antitank guns, well-informed sources declared today.

Because of interior lines of communication, the proximity of Sicilian bases for the air force and army reserves, Rommel has been able, with quantitatively much weaker forces, to stand off until now the huge co-ordinated Allied offensive and limit its gains, while continually threatening to seize the initiative at certain exposed points.

The impression prevails, however, that the Allied forces have such a preponderance of strength, both on the ground and the air, that regardless of the Nazi marshal's defensive skill he eventually have to go ahead and do the job we are instructed to do.

Outlines OWI Scope. Davis said co-operation with the press, radio and movie industry has been "OWI's policy from the start and will continue to be." In 1942, Davis said OWI's domestic budget was $9,000,000 and declared that the agency would have to spend many hundreds of millions of dollars if it tried to do the entire job of war information by itself.

In working through existing media, he said, OWI clears and issues more than 250 war news releases a week prepared by government war agencies, and handles an average of 2,500 queries a month from the press.

Similarly, the main activity of the domestic radio bureau was described as furnishing established radio programs. Similar co-operation between OWI and magazine editors has resulted in the publication of 1,500 stories and articles containing war information in the last seven months, Davis said.

Enter Pamphlet Field. More than $16,000,000 worth of newspaper and magazine space will be devoted by food advertisers alone to copy adapted to campaigns suggested by OWI, Davis reported, and if all other types of advertisers were included the total probably would exceed $100,000,000.

OWI has entered the pamphlet field to the extent of preparing and distributing 14 pamphlets, because it believes that "to a certain extent the people desire to have direct government messages." Twelve writers are so employed, Davis said.

"OWI has the private agencies of opinion to thank not only for their co-operation in getting out the facts, but also in the generous way in which they have permitted us to draw on them for top-flight personnel," Davis concluded. "The domestic branch is staffed by many key figures from newspapers, magazines, radio and advertising, many of whom have left their private posts to join OWI at a considerable personal sacrifice."

ally will be faced with the alternative of evacuation or annihilation. Informed sources claim that the German air force morale is at the lowest ebb of the war because of the long, heavy strain, serious losses and the hopeless outlook. Considered all together Allied planes are equal technically to those of the German air force and are being produced in a greater volume.

These sources state that Germany's aircraft production reached the peak two years ago and has been slightly on the downgrade since because of the bombings of industrial centers.

We are on the way to overpowering the enemy by sheer volume, according to these sources. Besides this, we are superior in the human element. The Germans can turn out new soldiers, but they cannot make first-class airmen by the same method. Questioning of captured pilots indicates that many German airmen no longer have their hearts in the struggle. Picked pilots still may bomb with determination, but as a rule they lack this spirit.

Son Freed; Father Admits Distilling

While his father pleaded guilty to charges of operating an illicit distillery in Rockdale county, Henry A. Berry yesterday was acquitted by a federal trial jury of charges of working in an unlawful distillery and violation of other sections of the internal revenue liquor laws.

Judge E. Marvin Underwood deferred imposition of sentence on the father, Henry E. Berry, and his co-defendant, Harold A. Tarpety, who pleaded guilty to the same charges.

Judge Underwood yesterday imposed a two-year probationary sentence on John Tucker, of Rockdale county, who pleaded guilty in federal court to charges of violation of internal revenue liquor laws.

IMAGINE a Yellow Cab, weighing half what the present cabs weigh, equipped with every comfort. That's one of the technical developments we can expect from this War. For magnesium, lighter than aluminum, will be plentiful and cheap.

But it is in the service we'll be able to render that we'll best feel the effects of what these years are teaching us.

We thought nothing, in the old days, of running a Yellow Cab—an empty cab—five or six miles out from the garage, to take a passenger, perhaps, two miles. Seven to ten miles of running for two miles of riding!

But not any more. Except in an emergency.

Now—with your splendid co-operation—we are getting advance warning of your trip, and a Yellow Cab that goes out your way with a passenger, picks you up en route or after dropping the other passenger. So every mile is more useful, and fewer cabs serve the public better.

War shortages forced us to learn these things. And both we and the public have learned that they are not just inconveniences, but sensible measures to ensure good taxi service.

When the war ends and we can buy new cabs again, we'll know how to make them do full duty in solving Atlanta's peculiar transportation problem.

Axis, Jammed in Mid-Tunisia's Hourglass Neck, Seems Doomed

By JOHN GROVER.
Associated Press Writer.
With time running swiftly against the Nazi forces in Tunisia it is one of war's ironic jokes that the Tunisian field of war is shaped like a rough hour-glass. The neck of the hour-glass is the narrow waist of Axis-held land between Chott Djerid and the Gulf of Gabes. The military strictures this imposes on General Rommel in the south and General Von Arnim in the north can be decisive in the coming campaign.

Allied intelligence estimates the German force as 150,000 men north of the narrow communications alley, 100,000 south of it, anchored on the Mareth line.

Bitter Choices.
The unsatisfactory choice left the Nazis is:
1. They can consolidate their forces north of the narrow and sacrifice mobility while becoming a concentrated target for massed Allied aircraft and the outnumbering Allied ground forces.
2. They can fight separately and take a chance on being cut in two, as even now threatens.

The situation of the all-but-divided Nazi forces is uncomfortable and threatening. Von Arnim is tied to the north, Tunis and Bizerte are the ultimate goals of the Allies. General Anderson's British First Army is a constant threat. Von Arnim cannot send any important reinforcements to Rommel without dangerously weakening the defense of Tunis-Bizerte.

The Allied forces pushing east through recaptured Kasserine gap also are a potential threat to Von Arnim.

Rommel's Peril.
Rommel faces no less than four separate columns, two major and two minor. Montgomery's Eighth Army on the south is too well known to Rommel after chasing him 1,500 miles from El Alamein. General Patton is knifing south-east from Gafsa with an obviously strong armored force.

In addition, a French force is thrusting east along the north shore of Chott Djerid, and another Allied column is headed northeast about 50 miles south-west of Medenine. This column flanks the Mareth line anchor of the southern Nazi force.

Rommel must decide whether to pull his force north along the coastal road to Sousse, abandoning southern Tunisia, or elect to fight it out south of the neck of the hour-glass and take his chances on ultimately evacuating his force from the poor port of Gabes.

This exit already is threatened by the British who seized the island of Djerba, only minutes away by plane.

Once any of the three columns west of the Mareth Line reaches the narrow, Rommel's power of choice is gone.

Would Be Boxed.
He will then be boxed in between the narrow and the Mareth Line with only the sea—largely controlled by Allied air and submarine forces—as a way of escape. This would put Von Arnim on the spot, with the consolidated Allied African forces massed against him from Sousse to Cape Serrat.

Either way, whether Rommel joins Von Arnim in the restricted hump of Tunisia, or whether he evacuates via Gabes, the task of the Allies is made easier.

The planes that must now scatter their effectiveness between Cape Serrat and Medenine can concentrate on a relatively small area then.

As the situation shapes up now, both Nazi forces are under threat. Even if they should join in the northern Tunisian area that is their last ditch stand, their position will not be measurably improved.

The Allied forces would consolidate in that event to bring their concentrated weight to bear on a smaller area. And if the Axis forces don't join, each faces two-front attacks by superior numbers.

The Ration Counter...

Your questions about all phases of the various rationing programs will be answered authoritatively by the Ration Counter. Telephone your questions to WATN 3876 between the hours of 10 a. m. and 6 p. m. Inquiries by mail must be accompanied by a self-addressed, stamped envelope. They should be addressed to the Ration Counter, care The Constitution, Atlanta.

Together with the announcement of point values for the new red-stamp rationing, OPA yesterday gave out another "how to shop" bulletin, the finer points of which are these:

- (1) First study the point values of the foods you buy most often. To help you, you'll find a point value table hanging up in your food store. (Or better yet, you can clip a meats and fats point value table from this morning's Constitution.)
- (2) Take your ration book two with you when you shop for meats, cheese, or any of the other items, just as you now do when buying processed foods. Tear out the stamps (red ones for the newly rationed foods) in the presence of your storekeeper or his delivery man.

Storekeeper May Give Customers Change in 1-Point Stamps

(3) If you find you do not have the exact amount of valid red stamps to give for your purchase, your storekeeper can give you change in one-point stamps. (For example, if you must give him a five-point stamp for a four-point purchase, he can give you one point change.) However, he cannot use the 2, 5 or 8-point stamps as change. Make sure that the one-point stamp has a letter on it which is valid at the time you receive it.

(4) Your storekeeper cannot always cut meat or cheese to the exact pound weight you wish. That means you must know how many points you should pay for ounces, too. A special table has been provided on the Official Table of Consumer Point Values for just such cases. This table breaks the points per pound down into ounces. If one of your purchases has an ounce value of less than a half a point, you do not have to pay an additional point.

Watch Date of Expiration

On 1-Point Red Stamps

(5) Budget your points. Spend red stamps carefully. Make them last for the entire ration period. When you receive one-point red stamps as change, use them the next time you shop, if possible, and be sure they don't expire unused.

(6) Remember, you still use the blue stamps for processed foods and stamps from war ration book one for sugar and coffee. No change can be made in blue stamps.

It also was pointed out that red stamps are not all valid during the entire ration period. Here's the way they become good during the month of April:

Week Beginning	Red Stamps Bearing Letter	Stamps Expire
March 29	A (16 points)	April 30
April 4	B (16 points)	April 30
April 11	C (16 points)	April 30
April 18	D (16 points)	April 30
April 25	E (16 points)	(to be announced)

File Application for Priority Assistance at WPB Office

A woman in Fitzgerald, Ga., asked yesterday about getting a priority to buy a refrigerator motor. "I have discovered that I must apply on form PD-1A to Washington, but no one around here seems to know what that is or where I can get one. Could you help me?"

This is one problem that has come up often, as priorities are so complicated. However, relief from such mix-ups is in sight. Regional Director Harry Thornton, of the War Production Board, has announced that the WPB is decentralizing. Applications for priority assistance on items costing less than $100 now can be filed at the nearest WPB office, processed by priority specialists in the Atlanta regional office, and reported on within two or three days.

Authority to begin construction on industrial and commercial projects costing $10,000 or less, including new construction, alterations, and additions, can also be speeded through a similar process, Thornton explained.

Your Dates With Uncle Sam

points. Roasts run from 6 to 8 points per pound.

Hamburger Defined.

Some perked up when they learned that hamburger is only 5 points per pound, as it is one of the most commonly used types of meat. However, hamburger and ground steak are two different things, OPA warns. The government defines hamburger as something made exclusively of scraps and other waste meats.

All butter and rationed type of cheese are eight points per pound; lard, shortening and margarine, five points; salad and cooking oils (excluding prepared salad dressings, such as mayonnaise and pure olive oil, which are not rationed), 6 points; and all canned fish, 7.

"Why it's not half as bad as I thought it was going to be, said most people, and one woman commented: 'Well, at least this ought to keep my meat market stocked a little better—I haven't been able to find many things I've wanted lately.'"

Lowndes Board Moves To Aid Meat Program

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION.

VALDOSTA, Ga., March 24.—C. L. Bartfield, chairman of the Lowndes County USDA War Board, states that his local organization has moved into action to help put in operation the newly announced national meat management program, designed to stamp out meat "black markets" and assure an equitable distribution of available meat supplies.

Chairman Bartfield has warned all persons in Lowndes county interested that the local board will demand a strict observance of all rules regarding slaughtering between this date and April 1 when rationing goes into effect.

How It Works Out.

In the United States, at 16 points per week per person, a family of four could spend 64 points of their red stamps for meats, cheese, fats, oils and canned fish for their week's menu. For example, they could buy a three-pound rib roast of beef, 21 points;

House Accepts Senate View of Salary Limit

WASHINGTON, March 24.—(AP) The house accepted late today the senate version of a measure nullifying President Roosevelt's $25,000-after-tax limit on war-time salaries and substituting a modified ceiling fixed by legislation.

The house action came on acceptance of a joint house-senate conference committee's recommendation. The measure will reach the senate tomorrow.

The legislation then will go to the White House as a rider on a bill boosting the nation's statutory debt limit from $125,000,000,000 to $210,000,000,000.

A country-wide ration-roundup yesterday showed that in some sections of the country there was a surge of meat buying this week: At St. Paul thousands flocked to stores to buy all the meat they could; in Des Moines, a dealer reported that he had 75 calls for meat from women asking that he put aside meat for them—"any kind, just so it's meat—and one customer bought $140 worth of smoked meat to take along when he moves to California.

As Atlanta's retail groceries were closed yesterday afternoon, there was no unusual meat buying reported and a check of the warehouses of large grocery concerns revealed only a slight increase in the past two weeks of meat sales. "However, we have been selling cheese in larger quantities than usual," several said. "We've especially had many requests for bulk cheese in 28-pound packages."

Rationing Quirks.

A strange thing appeared in dispatch from Washington yesterday: "One of the most unusual features of the (meat) program permits, for the first two months of rationing, bargain sales of meat at reduced coupon costs determined by butchers or other dealers on their own initiative. They can cut point values in this manner if they are overstocked with some products if they are in danger of spoiling." The staff of local OPA offices were surprised—"haven't heard anything about that!"—and several thought it may be a mix-up resulting from the fact that retail grocers will have a "point holiday" during the first two weeks of the rationing, i. e., they won't have to give points to their wholesalers for purchasing new rationed food.

Plans for the announcement of meat-rationing point values, it was pointed out that restaurants and other public eating establishments will continue to operate without customer coupons, but their over-all food supplies are rationed and legal restrictions on portions are being considered in Washington. Some of the reverberations from this are strange: If you go to a delicatessen to buy sandwich meat, you must pay ration points for it, but if you have the delicatessen make the meat into sandwiches, that's part of his regular business and you don't have to pay points for the sandwich.

Cafes Curbed To 3-4ths of December Meat

WASHINGTON, March 24.—(AP) OPA tonight limited restaurants and other institutional eating places to 75 per cent or less of the amount of meat, butter, cheese and similar products they used in December of last year, effective Monday, but did not restrict the portions they may serve individual customers.

Restaurants will buy meats and other products on the same point system as householders, but the number of points they may spend will be determined by a mathematical formula. A restaurant must make two calculations. Under the first formula the number of persons served during December of last year is multiplied by .93.

In the second formula, the point value of the actual meats and other products used last December—reduced by 25 per cent. The formula that gives the restaurant the smallest total of points determines its allotment for one month.

The initial allotment, however, will be for 11 months to cover the last few days of March and the month of April, and thereafter allotments will be made on a two-month basis.

Because of the complexity of these formulas, OPA authorized local ration boards to give emergency point allotments to restaurants to carry them for a few days until they can get a regular allotment.

Atlantan's Sub Torpedoes, Sinks Jap Submarine!

WASHINGTON, March 24.—(INS)—The U. S. Navy hung up a new record tonight with the disclosure that Lieutenant Commander William E. Ferrall, commander of an American submarine preying on Japanese supply lines, torpedoed and sank an enemy submarine.

Lieutenant Commander Ferrall described the sinking of nine other enemy vessels as "routine" but said that sending the Jap submarine to the bottom with a single torpedo was something of a "prize catch" for the crew. "We came upon the Jap submarine when we were submerged and on patrol," the American skipper said tonight. "They were on the surface near their base and they never saw us. We fired one torpedo and she filled up and sank rapidly, stern first."

"We didn't see any survivors and they never knew what hit them," Ferrall added.

Bag 50,000 Tons.

The long year of prowling enemy waters, so dangerous that no survivors were ever taken off the sunken ships, netted the sharp-shooting crew more than 50,000 tons of enemy shipping. Commander Ferrall's scorecard shows that his submarine destroyed seven Japanese cargo ships that were carrying urgently needed supplies to Jap invasion forces, two troops transports, carrying reinforcements, and the one "blue chip" Jap submarine. Ferrall's bag of 10 brings the total of Japanese ships sunk or damaged by U. S. submarines up to 200 since Pearl Harbor.

The year-long hunt for Japanese ships in the South Pacific and on sea lanes leading to Indo-China was not without its amusing incidents, Lieutenant Commander Ferrall said.

When one Jap troop transport was torpedoed, the explosion blew one of the transport's whale boats into the water right side up, and cars in place. When the second torpedo sent the transport to the bottom the Japs merely jumped overboard and climbed into their whaleboat.

Narrow Squeaks.

The courageous and daring submarine also had some narrow squeaks with sudden death. At one time it was sneaking up on an enemy convoy when the convoy was spotted by Allied bombers. Issuing swift orders to get out of there in a hurry, Ferrall saved the sub from being mistakenly bombed by Allied planes. The other officers of the long-winded submersible include Luther R. Johnson, of Atlanta.

Lt. Johnson Braved Pearl Harbor Attack

Officers on the submarine included Lieutenant (s. g.) Luther R. Johnson, of 547 Howell place, Atlanta. Lieutenant Johnson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Johnson, of 744 Ashby street, S. W. His wife is Mrs. Jessie Mae Johnson, also of Atlanta. Prior to his entry into the Navy,

Visitor Robbed In Hotel Here

City detectives yesterday were investigating theft of $750 from Everett Foster, Buffalo, N. Y., manufacturer, while he was asleep Tuesday night in a downtown hotel.

A check for $3,000 and $25 in cash were left in Foster's pockets, Detectives S. C. Dillingham and T. J. Miligan said. Foster, a maker of parts for Bell Aircraft Company, had been in Atlanta three days before the robbery.

Atlanta Navy Officer Dies In Car Crash

Lieut. Hatcher's Com- panion Suffers Burns in Accident.

NATICK, Mass., March 24.—(AP) A Navy lieutenant, tentatively listed in a police report as George B. Hatcher, was burned to death early today and his companion, listed on hospital records as Mrs. Shirley Hartwell, of Norwood, suffered burns and injuries, after their automobile was struck by a heavy trailer truck.

A police report, made after questioning of Mrs. Hartwell, identified Hatcher as a lieutenant, junior grade, of Atlanta, Ga.

Truck Driver Lawrence McKinnon, of Malden, reported to police that the automobile had been stopped on the roadway of the Worcester-Boston turnpike and that his vehicle crashed into the rear of the car in the early morning darkness.

McKinnon said that fire burst out in the rear of the car, which had been pushed from the roadway by the impact, and that a series of explosions followed, flames spreading to near-by woodland.

He said that he pulled Mrs. Hartwell from the automobile, but that the fire prevented him from removing the man, who was pinned behind the steering wheel. The woman suffered head and face injuries and slight burns on the legs, the hospital reported.

Fire Chief Lyman Brown expressed an opinion that gasoline had been carried in cans found in the rear of the automobile and had been ignited by the collision.

Hatcher Commissioned Last December

Lieutenant Hatcher was commissioned last December, entering the service following several years' association with Courts & Company here, where he was in charge of the municipal bond department. Before going with Courts & Company, Hatcher was in the bond department of the Trust Company of Georgia.

He lived on Golf View drive. He was from Winston-Salem, N. C. His wife and their young daughter live with her family in Raleigh.

PRAISE THE LORD —
WE'RE NOT A-GOIN' FISHIN'...

How about you?

NO, JOHNNY isn't a-goin' fishin'. And Bill and Jack and Pete and the ten thousand other Americans being inducted every day—are not a-goin' fishin'. Not today and probably not for some time to come.

Of course they'd like to go but they've got something bigger on the fire—something a lot more important to them and to their country. Until that job is done, fishing is out. And hunting, too—and many other good times that free men enjoy.

For these are the things that Johnny is fighting for. The right to work as he likes and to play as he likes; to read the books he likes... marry the girl he likes... live his life as he chooses to live it. In short, to enjoy the thousands of little freedoms that go to make up the American way of life which is being challenged.

That's why Johnny and his fellow-Americans are not a-goin' fishin', and that's why they would have every right to ask:

"How about YOU? Are you folks back home still a-goin' fishin'—or are you doing everything possible to help us men on the fighting fronts?"

The column on the right is designed to help you answer that question. It lists some of the jobs that must be done—today—by all of us—to win this war.

Fortunately National Distillers, like the rest of the distilling industry, was ready instantly to "swing into position" when the enemy struck. We are producing no whiskey today. Our entire production facilities are devoted 100% to war alcohol—used for munitions, rubber, medicines and many other essential war needs.

Check this list
and ask yourself:
"AM I STILL A-GOIN' FISHIN'?"

- I regularly buy War Stamps and Bonds—at least 10% of my income.
- I avoid unnecessary expenditures in order to help prevent inflation.
- I cheerfully observe all rationing regulations and do not hoard.
- I budget my ration points carefully and don't waste food.
- I work where I can do the most good for the war effort.
- I get to work on time and am never avoidably absent.
- I do my best to stay healthy.
- I do my best to avoid accidents, especially if I work in a war plant.
- I watch what I say and spread no rumors.
- I conserve tires and gasoline.
- I share my car with others.
- I travel only when absolutely necessary.
- I carry my own bundles when shopping to save manpower, gas and tires.
- I contribute to the Red Cross and all War Relief funds.
- I save and turn in scrap metal, used cooking fats and other needed materials.
- I do Civilian Defense work.
- I work with the Red Cross or other volunteer groups.
- I am a regular blood donor.
- I volunteer for Nurse's Aide work.
- I pay my taxes on time and in full.
- I do community social service work.
- I am prepared to quietly cooperate with the F.B.I. in apprehending suspicious persons.
- I am planting a Victory garden.
- I contribute books to the men in the service.
- I write to friends and relatives in the service.
- I observe dimout and blackout regulations to the letter.

This list, of course, is not complete. Every man, woman and child will find many other ways to help. Check this list with your neighbors and find out what they are doing. But get going! Do all you can! And do it now! Consult your local Civilian Defense Council for further information.

2—Energize your body with RICH, RED BLOOD!

THESE two important steps may help you to overcome Sour Stomach Jerky Nerves Loss of Appetite Underweight Digestive Complaints Weakness Poor Complexion

Improper diet, overwork, undue worries, colds, the flu or other illness often impairs the stomach's digestive functions and reduces the red-blood strength.

At such times Nature needs extra help to restore its proper functions and balance. Undigested food places a tax on the system... insufficient blood strength is a detriment to good health.

If you are subject to poor digestion or suspect deficient red-blood as the cause of your trouble, yet have no organic complication or focal infection, SSS Tonic may be just what you need! SSS Tonic is especially designed to build-up blood strength when deficient... and to promote those stomach juices which digest the food so your body can make proper use of it in rebuilding worn-out tissue.

Welcome for Vice President

Wallace Will Reach Santiago on Friday.

SANTIAGO, Chile, March 24.—(AP)—Leaders of all political parties united today in calling Chileans to assemble Friday at the Santiago airport to greet Vice President Henry A. Wallace, who, an announcement said, is playing "an important role in bettering the conditions of the laboring classes and in bringing about a better understanding among the American nations."

(Wallace, who is making an air tour of seven Latin-American countries, reached Cali, Colombia, this evening, after a three-hour flight from Balboa, Canal Zone. He will remain overnight in Cali and spend tomorrow night in Lima.)

(On hand at the Cali airport as the vice president arrived were Alberto Gonzalez Fernandez, the Colombian foreign minister, pro tem, Santiago Rivas Camacho, minister of economy, Mariano Ramos, governor of the department of Del Valle, American Ambassador Arthur Bliss Lane, Ruiz Solar, the Chilean ambassador, and Alberto Lleras Camacho, recently named Colombian ambassador to Washington.)

To Receive Message. Meanwhile, two Argentine deputies, Eduardo Araujo and Carlos Cisneros, arrived today and said they would present Wallace a message from the United States, extending greetings and homage to the United States.

The message expresses admiration for the United States' "sacrifices for a triumph which the noble cause demands." Enthusiasm of the Chileans for Wallace's visit increased hourly, and they are planning one of the greatest receptions ever accorded a foreign visitor. Newspapers are urging a city-wide turnout at the stadium Sunday for an address by the vice president.

Plans To Tour Nation. During a 10-day visit Wallace will travel from one end of the 2,600-mile-long country to the other. He plans to visit orchards, vineyards, farms and dairies in the south, and nitrate fields and gold and copper mines in the north.

Observers here note that relations between the United States and Chile have been steadily improving recently, although an accusation several months ago by Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles that both Chile and Argentina were harboring Axis spies caused President Juan Antonio Rios to delay a scheduled visit to Washington.

President Rios, always staunchly democratic, later brought about a break in diplomatic relations with the Axis, saying that this "was the only course compatible with the supreme interests of the nation and America."

At the same time, Chile rounded up several hundred spy and propaganda suspects.

Bob Toombs Kin Gets Navy Cross

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. WASHINGTON, Ga., March 24. Captain Laurence Toombs DuBose, son of Mrs. George DuBose, of Washington, D. C., and great-grandson of Robert Toombs, famous Georgia statesman, has been awarded the Navy Cross with honor.

In the battle participated in last November 13, off Guadalcanal, 18 Japanese ships were sunk and 10 damaged.

Disclosure of the award to Captain DuBose and citations to eight naval heroes revealed that four of the men honored were led by Captain DuBose.

In announcing the awards, the Navy said only that they were occasioned by the recent arrival on the west coast of a "battle-scarred cruiser with at least four notable men in her guns for Japanese victories."

Miss Anne DuBose, only daughter of Captain DuBose, was last year a student at the University of Georgia.

DPA Plans No Lower Cotton Textile Prices

WASHINGTON, March 24.—(AP)—The Office of Price Administration said today it planned no general downward revision of cotton textile prices.

Bernard F. Haley, director of the textile, leather and apparel price division, said the statement was prompted by "a great deal of talk in trade circles" that OPA contemplates a broad reduction.

Because of increasing costs, he said, it may be necessary in a few instances to increase prices.

Rickenbacker On Dues Issue

Also Declines Invitation To Sit on Stage During Flyer's Talk.

Albert W. Gossett, president of the Atlanta Federation of Trades, announced yesterday that he had declined an invitation to sit on the stage at the Municipal Auditorium during the address Sunday of Captain Eddie Rickenbacker on the labor question.

The Atlanta labor leader took issue with a published statement of the famous aviator to the effect that certain individuals are seeking "to twist" his opinions on labor during the war.

"Certainly the Atlanta Federation of Trades," said Gossett, "has not and will not attempt to twist anything said by Mr. Rickenbacker. The working people are not dumb; they can read plain English and it takes no twisting of these statements insofar as labor is concerned to know the real purpose of Mr. Rickenbacker's visit to Atlanta. We have been too long interested in organizing the workers for the bomber plant to have any doubt about his timed and timely mission to Atlanta at this time."

Rickenbacker had invited war workers "to come and hear from his own lips" what he thinks of labor.

Gossett further stated that Rickenbacker believes that union initiation fees and dues should be abolished for the duration of the war and said that if this were done it would mean "the utter destruction of the organized labor movement, which seems to be the captain's real purpose."

Now Down to 2,000 a Month

STOCKHOLM, March 24.—(AP)—Warplane production in Germany and enslaved countries has dropped from a peak of 3,000 a month to approximately 2,000 a month with in the last year, an industrial engineer thoroughly familiar with Nazi war economy declared today.

The figures, which show the increasing difficulties Germany is facing in an effort to keep abreast of the Allies in air power, do not include training planes, this source said.

Among the causes of the decline, he listed inferior labor, due to the replacement of skilled men with inexperienced women and in different foreign hands; bottleneck in transportation of coal and iron; undernourishment of workers, which after three years is beginning to result in a marked loss of efficiency, and, finally, the displacement of war economy caused by paralyzing RAF raids.

The industrial expert said he thought Air Minister Sir Archibald Sinclair's recent statement in the British house of commons gave a good picture of the real effects produced by RAF bombings of German industry. Sinclair estimated the decline of daily coal production in the Ruhr, Saar and Aachen districts at 80,000 tons, the drop in steel output of the Duesseldorf-Duisburg plants at a million and a quarter tons.

A recent decree forbidding use of iron and steel in a long list of products ranging from liquid containers to counterweights indicates how severely this drop in production is being felt in Germany.

The Nazi press, too, has been lauding technical advances which have enabled the saving of steel. Newspapers said, the amount of steel used in 15 centimeter shells had been reduced from 143 to 125 pounds and in 550-pound bombs to 395 pounds.

The transportation problem, meantime, was reported so snarled

MacArthur's Planes Attack 9 Jap Bases, Blast Merchantman

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA, Thursday, March 25.—(AP)—Allied planes attacked nine Japanese bases, hitting a merchantman off New Guinea, the high command announced today in its noon communique.

The merchantman, a 5,000-ton vessel, was bombed off Kaimana, which is in northwestern New Guinea, approximately 600 miles north of Darwin, Australia. Another smaller ship took a damaging near miss. Three enemy planes attempting to attack the Allies' medium bombers were driven off, one of them being damaged.

Some 500 miles north of Darwin in the Kai islands, two formations of medium bombers caused heavy damage by low-level attacks on the Japanese-occupied towns of Langger, Faan, Koolfer and other villages. Two small coastal vessels were seriously hit.

A medium bomber also raided the town of Dobo on the Aroe islands. Buka, which is at the northern tip of the Solomon archipelago, was attacked at night for two hours by medium bombers, which intermittently dropped bombs on the airfield runway and dispersal bays.

Allied Air Activity.
Gasmata, on the south coast of New Britain islands, some 325 miles northeast of the Allied base of Port Moresby, New Guinea, was raided at night by an Allied medium bomber, which strafed the airfield and again by a heavy Allied bomber in a daylight attack.

Over Wewak, New Guinea, 370 miles north of Port Moresby, an Allied reconnaissance plane was set upon by three enemy fighters. The Allied plane shot the tail off

Savannah Gets 48-Hour Work Week April 15

War Man-Power Commission Expects To Ease Labor Shortage.

By The Associated Press.
The War Man-Power Commission yesterday fixed April 15 as the date for shifting workers in Chatham county and Savannah to a 48-hour work week.

Extension of the work week in the Savannah area, the WMC said, would aid in alleviation of labor shortages "which are and will impede the war effort."

The commission said a recent survey showed a demand for more than 7,000 workers and a current supply of only about 1,000 white women who might be utilized at shipyards and in clerical jobs at other establishments.

An estimated migration figure of approximately 5,500 has been certified to the National Housing Administration for use in programming housing facilities for the area.

Passes Are Strained.
The 48-hour week will apply to employers of eight persons or more. State, county and municipal employees and farm workers are exempted.

Workers now under the wage and hour law will receive time and a half for overtime but those not covered by that law who are now working only 40 hours will be paid straight overtime for work in excess of a 40-hour week. Where employers desire to pay time and a half for overtime to workers not covered by the wage and hour law, permission must be secured from the labor-management committee of the WMC. It was explained that this provision gives the WMC a measure of control over shifting of workers from essential wartime jobs to non-essential occupations.

Savannah recently was reclassified by the WMC as an acute labor shortage area. This had the effect of placing the city in areas in which no renewal of supply contracts should be made.

The work week will not be extended in cases where extension would involve release of workers who cannot be promptly placed in other suitable employment. Employers will not be able to hire workers subject to the order if the work week is less than the minimum wartime work week.

Exceptions will be made where extension of the work week would be impracticable in view of the nature of the operations, or where it would not contribute to reduction of labor requirements. Also excepted will be cases where the extension would conflict with federal, state or local law or regulation limiting hours of work.

Macon and Brunswick were placed on a 48-hour work week last month.

Most of the war industries in the affected areas already were on a 48-hour week.

4 Georgia Congressmen Have Sons in Service

WASHINGTON, March 24.—(AP)—At least 121 of the 531 members of congress have sons and daughters in the armed services.

This was disclosed today on the basis of a survey informally conducted by a group of congressmen. The survey is still under way, sponsors said, and some members may have been overlooked. The list may grow beyond its present number.

Representative George J. Eates, of Massachusetts, the survey showed, has three sons in the Navy and a daughter in the WAVES. He had a son-in-law who was killed in action.

Georgia members who have sons in the service are:
Congressman Paul Brown, a son, Navy Ensign Robert T. Brown; Congressman E. E. Cox, Navy Lieutenant Lamar P. Cox; Congressman Stephen Pace, Marine Cadet Stephen Pace Jr.

Senator Walter F. George, the survey reports, has two sons in the service. First Lieutenant Heard F. George in the Army and Navy Lieutenant J. Marcus George.

Georgia Gasoline Tax Revenue Shows Drop of Million Dollars

State gasoline tax receipts for March were off about $1,000,000 for the second consecutive month and further reductions are expected in view of more drastic fuel rationing regulations, it was revealed here yesterday. Even at the present rate the loss would amount to $12,000,000 a year in the state's chief source of revenue.

Receipts from the six-cent gasoline levy for February were $1,172,000 compared with $2,160,000 the same month in pre-rationing 1941, State Auditor B. E. Thrasher said.

Governor Arnall told the recently adjourned general assembly that a special session might have to be called this summer unless there is some lifting of gasoline restrictions or the government give financial aid to seaboard states.

Done by Economy.
He pledged, however, to do his utmost to operate the state on available revenues and expressed hope that this could be done by economy, by suspension of state highway construction and by refraining from any expansion of services.

Income tax returns amount to $3,312,711 so far this year, compared with $2,794,538 on the same

Give China Full Voice in Peace, Solon Urges

Fears Churchill Plan To Whip Japs Last Upsets Nanking.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—(AP)—Representative McCormack, of Massachusetts, the house Democratic leader, said today China must have equal voice at the peace table and took issue with Prime Minister Churchill's suggestion for a post-war council of Europe and council of Asia.

In a statement, McCormack said the British leader had made a contribution for discussion by this suggestion in his Sunday speech, but added:

"There are many who feel that regionalism is contrary to the concept of the global character of the present struggle. . . . Peace to me seems to be indivisible, and the doctrine of regionalism may lead to future world disorder instead of bringing the world closer to the concept of universal order and decency."

There have been reports of some concern in this capital that Mr. Churchill's address might be disheartening to the Chinese, stressing as it did that it might be 1943 before the European war is over and all the "necessary" forces are transferred to the Pacific theater to strike at Japan.

Russians Gain New Positions

"several" more, listing seven in one sector alone.

The only one of these points named is Safonovo, which the communique said is 2 1-2 miles north of the railway station of Dorogobuzh, which is approximately 50 miles east of Smolensk on the main rail line to Moscow. In this action "the enemy suffered heavy losses in men and material," the Moscow bulletin said.

Reds Erase Company.

In another sector of this front Russian units wiped out about a company of enemy infantry and captured booty including five tanks and 14 guns, the communique said, while at still another point "strongly fortified enemy positions" were won after fighting which left 200 Germans dead on the battlefield.

The official Soviet Army newspaper Red Star said that German counterattacks on this front were unusually violent.

Red Star said that a "gap in the enemy's defense" had been driven in the past few days on the western bank of the upper reaches of the Dnieper river on this Smolensk front.

Kuban Area Thaws.

The campaign in the Kuban area of the Caucasus before Novorossisk has been resumed in the midst of the thaw which had brought the front to a virtual standstill for weeks. Apparently the ground is drier now.

By taking Slavyanskaya, 45 miles northeast of Novorossisk, as announced in yesterday's communique, the Russians moved westward considerably toward the Kerch strait. The fall of Abinskaya as announced tonight was more of a threat to Novorossisk, which is south of the strait.

Slavyanskaya is 72 miles from the strait, which separates the Taman peninsula of the Caucasus from the Kerch peninsula of the Crimea, and along this route lies the Germans' most likely escape route if they are forced to evacuate the Caucasus.

The river Kuban flows between Slavyanskaya and Abinskaya, and in this swampy sector, according to Red Star, fighting is progressing under especially complicated weather conditions. The struggle is for narrow strips of land between swamps.

Nazi Initiative.

The Germans apparently still held the initiative in the central sector of the long front, where they have pushed the Russians back in the Donets valley below Kharkov and are pushing toward Kursk to the north.

The Soviet midnight communique said that in the Belgorod area north of Kharkov a battalion of German infantry "supported by 12 tanks made an attempt to attack our position."

"Our troops annihilated 150 Hitlerites and disabled three tanks," the communique continued. "The Germans had to beat a hasty retreat. On another sector two enemy artillery batteries were destroyed by Soviet artillery fire and a large concentration of enemy infantry was dispersed."

A few miles to the south, in a region north of Chuguev, Russian troops "engaged enemy infantry and tanks as they tried to reach the northern Donets," the communique said. "Our troops repulsed all Hitlerite attacks, destroyed nine German tanks and 14 motor vehicles and annihilated over 100 Germans."

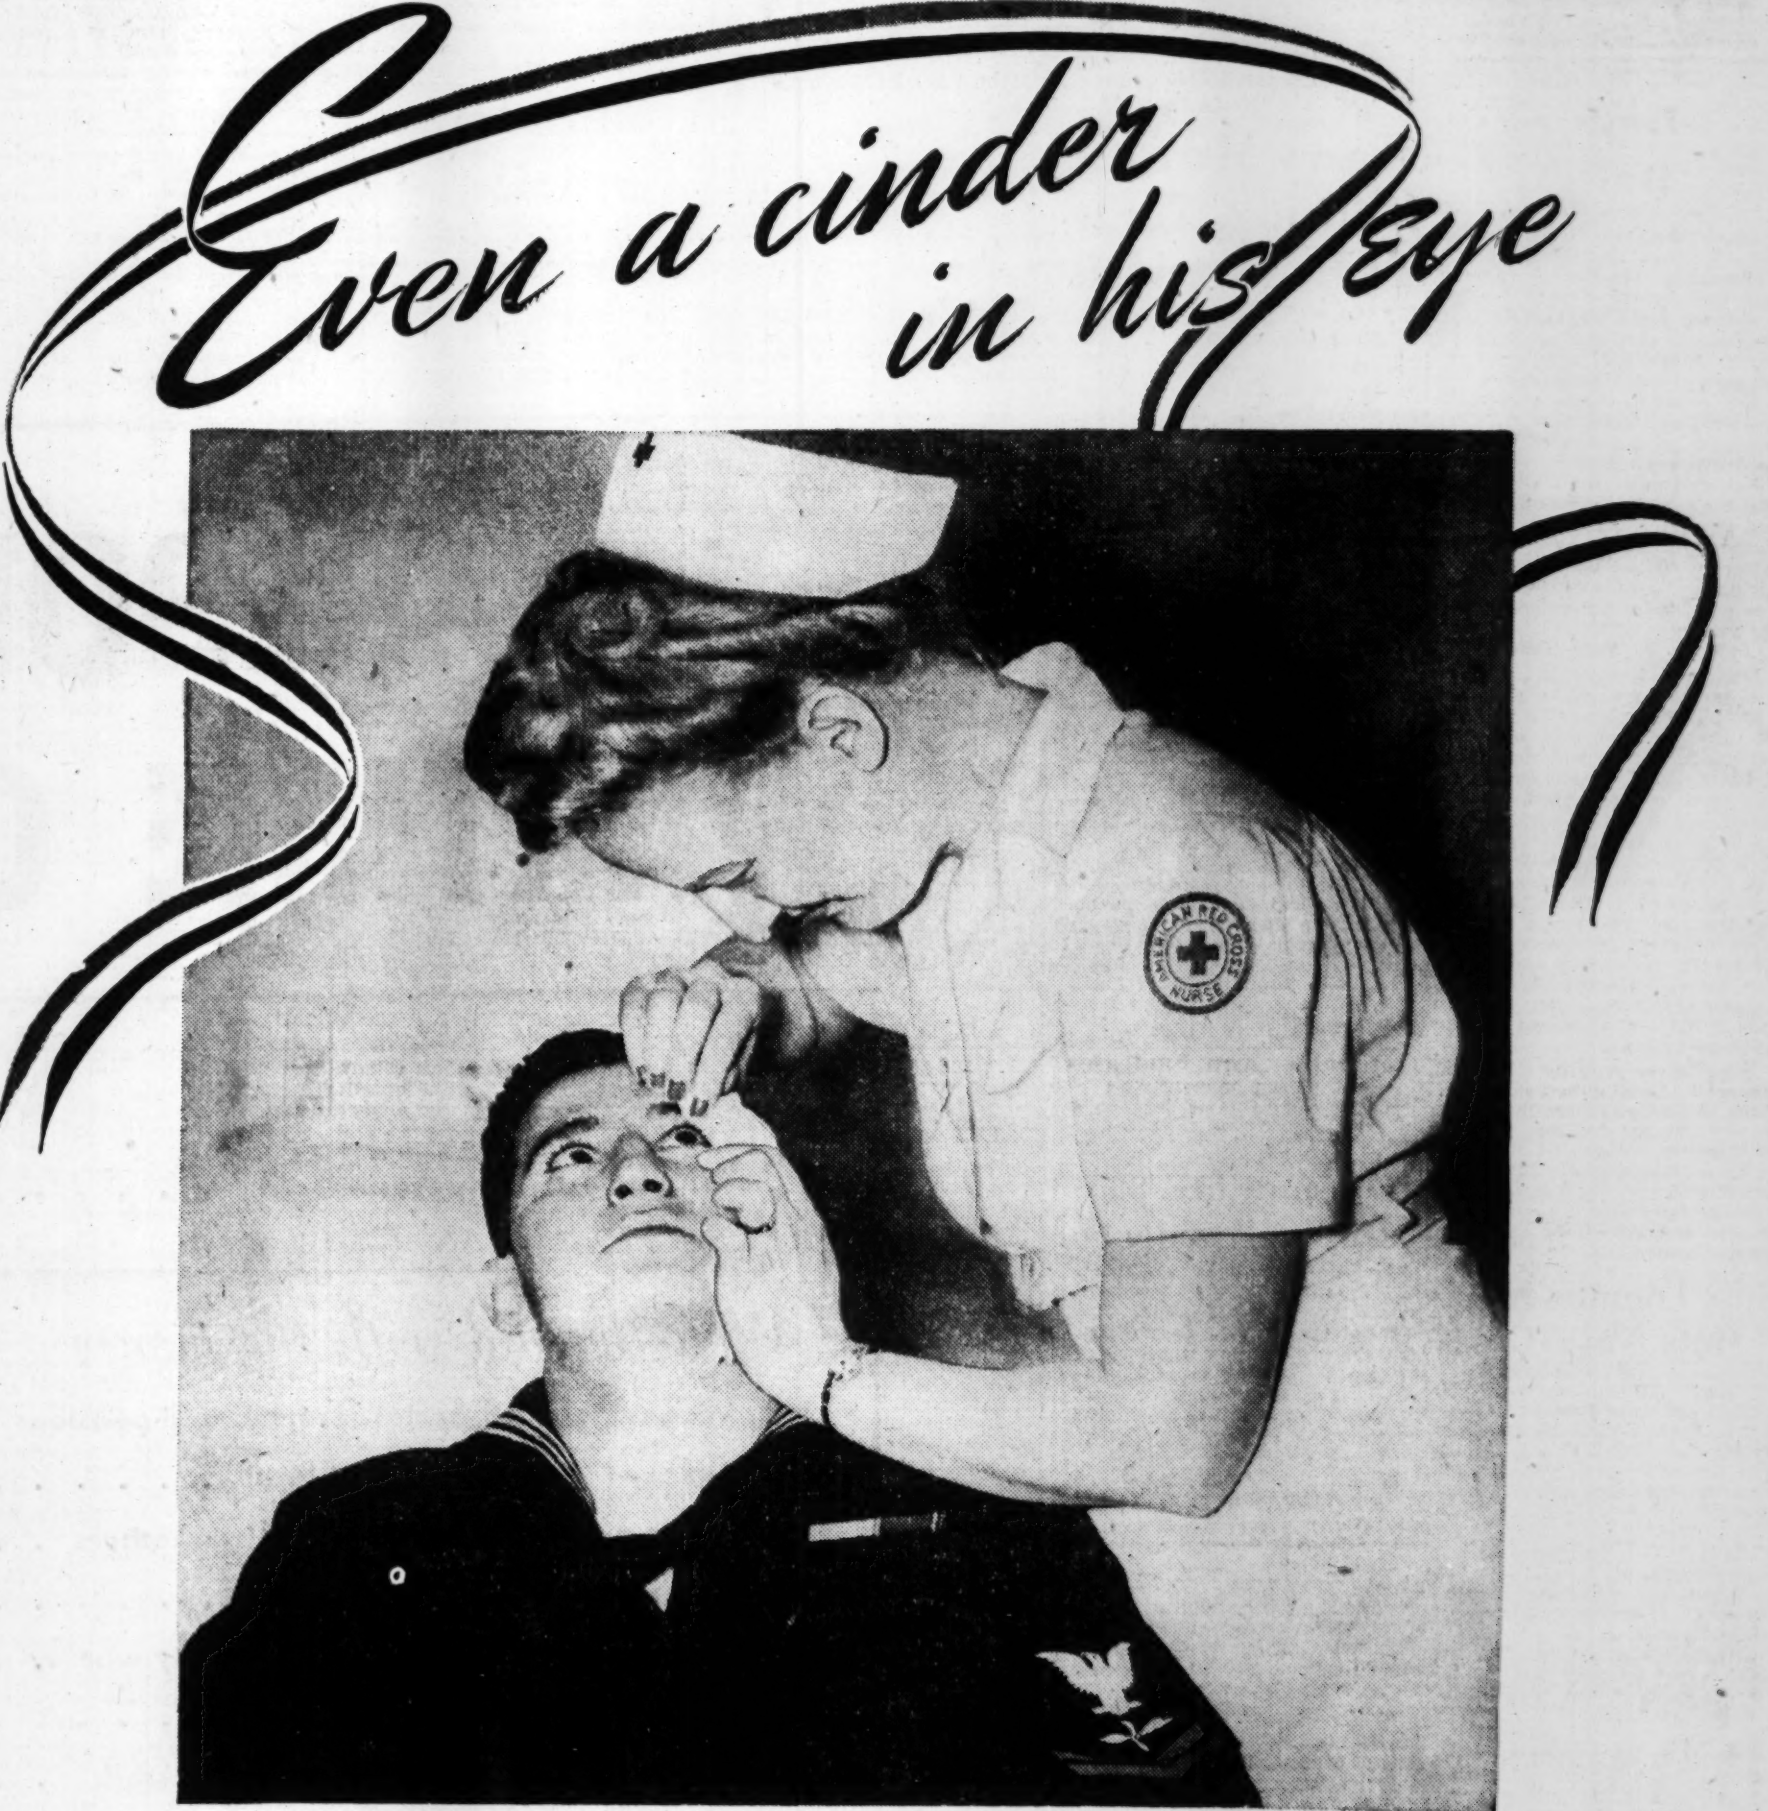

Veterans' Pension Laws

Extension Is Signed

WASHINGTON, March 24.—(AP)—President Roosevelt today signed legislation extending the veterans' pension laws to provide rehabilitation for those serving in the armed forces during the present war. Veterans rated as totally disabled will be eligible for a training course of not more than four years. The act establishes a $500,000 revolving fund to make advances up to $100 to individual trainees.

REQUIEM MASS FOR HINSLEY.

MADRID, March 24.—(AP)—The Spanish papal nuncio, Gaetano Ciccognani, the bishop of Madrid and the British and American ambassadors attended a requiem mass yesterday in honor of the late Arthur Cardinal Hinsley, archbishop of Westminster and primate of the Catholic church in England, who died March 17.

HUMAN SERVICES FOR FIGHTING MEN don't come in small enough sizes to earn the neglect of your Red Cross. And jobs don't come big enough and exacting enough to intimidate this world-wide organization which takes your own heart into action on the battlefronts of the world, into rest areas on foreign soil, into camps and stations in our own country, for that matter, which are often thousands of miles away from home in this beloved old land of ours.

Let your Red Cross take your own heart into action! Dig down deep and give until it helps! Make yourself a part of this agency that knows no obstacle in its life-saving, comfort-bringing, encouraging activities. Help—by giving—your Red Cross do the things you would like to do yourself.

GIVE—like he fights—ALL OUT!

Ladies' Hats Can't Be Classified For Rationing

Ladies have requested me to write something about the trend in spring millinery.

They want to know if priorities will demolish the star-spangled bonnets. This might happen if anybody knew whether ladies' hats came under the classification of clothing or groceries. The worse thing I have seen so far this spring is an off-the-face hat on an in-the-hat face. That will take some figuring out. But even Maine and Vermont will string along with us there.

Nobody knows what a lady's hat is. It's old lace without the arse. It certainly is not worn for protection against the elements. Just last summer the girls were wearing a pom-pom held together by two straps.

The off-the-face hat looks like a bird's nest that has fallen out of a tree. But, like all things, it could have been worse.

Suppose the priorities do get the bonnets? Nothing can stop a girl from whipping up something from an old laundry bag and a couple of buttons.

I'll guarantee that my wife will break an egg over her head and stick a feather in it. And it will be the prettiest thing you ever saw, allowing for climatic conditions and evaporation in transit.

If there is a "Black Market" in millinery it sure will be all colors of the rainbow.

I don't think anybody in Washington is qualified to classify women's millinery as haberdashery, dry goods or good red herring. I am worried over her footwear more.

A girl will have to get through 1943 on three pairs of shoes. And her toes are out to start with.

Says:

Heavy Censorship Can Kill Public Enthusiasm

AN OLD, old saying is: "There are two ways of doing a thing—the right way and the Army way."

This applies to Army method, not to the personnel of the Army. It describes the thick-witted manner in which the Army method deals with a problem, say, for instance, censorship.

Army censorship is usually pretty dumb. Mind you, I say censorship, not censors, as censors do not make the rules of censorship but only carry them out, and most censors are smart fellows who realize the dumbness of the rules as much as the correspondents to whose copy the rules apply.

The idea of censorship is, of course, to withhold information that might prove of value to the enemy, and with that idea no one will quarrel. However, it is on the question of what constitutes information of value to the enemy that Army censorship displays its dumbness, and I might add, Navy censorship, too.

In this war practically all information seems to be deemed of possible value to the enemy and the result is the entire situation is shrouded in such mystery as to make it practically a private war. The war correspondents with our own American forces are given little leeway in writing their stories, hence we have had few of the detailed and colorful dispatches that are permitted out of Russia, and from other battle fronts. The upshot, in my opinion, is the loss of a great uplifting influence for morale at home.

In World War I, the correspondents with our troops were permitted to write about the various divisions taking part in the action and about the units and individuals thereof, and in fact every division had its own correspondent from newspapers in the section of the nation the division represented, and the people at home felt they were in direct touch with their boys at the front.

THIS aroused deep personal interest and tremendous enthusiasm among the people at home, but nowadays with the names of units carefully suppressed and the whereabouts and the doings of these units a matter of great secrecy, the folks hear nothing and do not have that sense of contact with their boys in the lines. Unless the enemy is much dumber than the one in the other World War and cannot learn the identity of the forces pouring down on him it is kept out of the papers. I think the secrecy a mistake from the standpoint of home morale.

I believe in the exploitation of our officers and men, individually and collectively, when circumstances justify, because, in my opinion, publicity of that nature is a tonic to the home folks. They want to read about the human interest phases of the war, which they can understand better than they can dry communications of movement, and to that end I think the censorship in both branches of the services should be revised to a point where, without violating the purpose of censorship, the correspondents can tell us more of the goings-on.

Regent Parley To Study Drain On Finances

Leasing of WGST Also Will Be Discussed.

A picture of tight finances brought on by the shifting of University System students from classroom to battlefield and rationing of motor fuel will be laid before the new board of regents to day as members hold their first session since organization.

Chancellor S. V. Sanford said the drafting of teen-age youths had slashed income from fees and might necessitate an increase in fees or a greater contribution by the state for support of colleges.

Sanford added, however, he had not determined what he would recommend to the board, but he has several plans under consideration, one cutting smaller college terms from 12 to nine months. All schools of the system are now running the full year to speed output of graduates.

The cost of operation doesn't drop proportionately with the exodus of students, and the expense of a small class is almost as great as that of a larger one, he pointed out.

The government program of training fighting men at state colleges will take up some of the slack, the chancellor said, but not enough.

Another matter facing the board is an amicable settlement of the leasing of state-owned Station WGST to conform with requirements of the federal communications commission.

Although the lease is held by Southern Broadcasting Stations, the state must take greater control under FCC requirements, and this might make it necessary to take complete charge of the Georgia Tech station.

VIERECK PLEADS INNOCENT. WASHINGTON, March 24.—(AP) George Sylvester Viereck pleaded innocent today to six counts of a new government indictment charging him with violation of the foreign agents registration act.

WGST License Wins Extension For 90 Days

FCC May Renew If Given 'Assurance' by Tech.

The present license of radio station WGST, held by Georgia Tech, will be extended for 90 days, it was decided tentatively yesterday by the Federal Communications Commission at Washington, according to an Associated Press report.

The FCC called for assurance the school "will in fact assume and discharge the full responsibility of a licensee."

In this connection, the commission announced it would consider granting renewal of the license being sought by Tech if the commission were given the assurance it requested.

Informed of the FCC's actions, Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of Georgia Tech, said "the school and the Board of Regents will arrange to meet with the requirements of the FCC under their new rulings."

He pointed out the present operating agreement with Southern Broadcasting Stations, Inc., was made prior to these rulings of the commission.

"However, there is nothing unusual nor unexpected in the decision of the commission," he added.

Further application for renewal of the license, the FCC said, should be filed within 60 days and set out a plan of the station for the "acquisition of the necessary facilities and equipment, and for the business management, representation and control of its future operations, together with a list of all persons to participate therein."

Wife Unwise to Appear Uncertain Of Her Husband's Love

Dear Dixie:

I am a young married woman 22 years old and have a 16-month-old baby and another on the way. My husband, whom I married two and a half years ago is 27. We have not gotten along very well since the first year. He is a good provider, but he seems to feel that that is as far as he should go. He has not been happy and has told me ever so often to go to my mother's. He was furious when I told him about the second baby coming and told me again to go to my mother's. He has tried to run me off for at least six months. I do not want to leave because of my baby and he tells me I know a good thing when I've got it. I do, because I love him very much, but sometimes he insults me so until I feel I do not love him

By Dixie George.

enough after all. I have an inferiority complex and am very timid. He says he cannot have any friends because of me, but when his friends come they always talk about things which happened to them in years gone by and he never tries to prepare me for them. He asks them to come without consulting me and then if the house is untidy in the least he gets mad with me and tells me to leave. We live near his people and he is down with them nearly all the time. Regardless of how hard I try to work to prepare his meals and have them ready on time, he fusses. He never tells me where he is going somewhere but he never misses telling his mother and sister. He leaves everything for me to do and he tells me I am lazy and do nothing for him. I want him to be happy but I do not know how to go about it. I have been smoking for about a year and he dislikes it very much, but why should I stop when he will find something else wrong with me? I do not believe he loves me although I have asked him several times, but he never gives me a straight answer. He never wants to discuss anything with me and I am at a loss as to what to do. He treats me like a slave rather than a wife. He accuses me of having affairs with other men and it has never entered my mind, for I have too much respect for myself and my money to spend for myself and very little for the baby. Of course we do have food and clothing and I do not expect too much, but more than I have now. How can I make my home happier for him and the baby? I do not want to leave for I respect marriage too much for that and I do want to make him happy. His own mother is surprised at the way he is acting now. I am so worried for I have a great fear of everything.

A LONELY WIFE.

I think you are humoring your husband too much, especially in your condition. You should let him know that you demand more consideration and attention. Don't argue with him when he fusses at you, and when he raises Cain because he thinks the house is not in running order, ask him why he doesn't get a servant to help if he doesn't think you are carrying on. When he brings guests home without consulting you, let him suffer the consequences and don't worry yourself about the way he acts. If you were interested in entering into the conversation, you might steer it into channels which do not include their past experiences. I see no excuse for you being made unhappy like this, and if I were you I would not take my husband's actions so seriously. When he acts rudely and unpleasantly toward you, just give him the silent treatment for it will get under his skin quicker than anything else. Your inferiority complex is the cause of your unhappiness. You must not be like that and must always remember that you are a woman and a woman deserves the best. Stop doing so much for him and try to be cooperative all the time. Stop inquiring into his affairs and let him go when he wants to, for your indifference to him will be the best way to treat him. I think that you should tell him once and for all, that you are due some consideration and give him a dose of his own medicine. Then let the matter drop, for the time being, anyway, for in your condition you should not be worried about these things. Stop asking him if he loves you, for he is getting a great delight in thinking that he has you worried. Nothing gives some men such an inflated ego as to think that their wives are worried for fear that they will lose their love. Since conditions are so bad with you, it might be a good idea if you did take his advice and go to your mother's until the baby comes. I am sure that it would be better for you and it would keep you from worrying. When, or if you go, be sure to tell your husband that his failure as a husband is the cause of your actions. Let him know of your contempt for his treatment of you, but also make it clear that you expect him to take care of you and the child and to see that neither of you suffer any.

MY DAY: House-to-House Search for Workers

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

HARTFORD, Conn., Tuesday.—After my press conference yesterday morning, I spent an hour with the small conference group which gathered in Washington over the weekend under the auspices of the United States Students' Assembly Committee. They have learned a great deal from the various speakers to whom they have listened. All of them felt that the conference had been fruitful and would help them in organizing similar ones in their own localities. Miss Thompson and I had a little difficulty deciding how we were going to reach New Haven in time to make our connections for the evening meeting at Hartford. We took a train which was supposed to make a good connection at New Haven, but we were late and missed it, so the Governor of Connecticut rescued us and had the state police bring us to Hartford. This was very fortunate, because we only had 10 minutes to spare before the Governor went on the air and I followed.

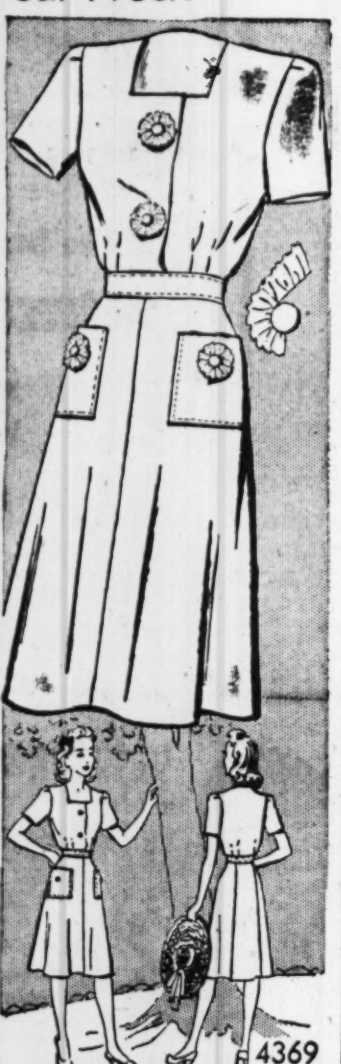

The meeting, under the auspices of the Hartford War Council, preceded a house-to-house canvass which begins today in an effort to enlist the workers needed for industry in this area. If the attendance at the meeting is any gauge of the interest which people take, they should have no difficulty in getting everyone to work. After the meeting last night, girls who represented all different types of work being done in this area, came by. They had acted as ushers and it was interesting to see Girl Scouts, Red Cross workers of every kind, WAACS, WAVES, workers from the factories and uniformed drivers for these same factories, and many other, file past. This area already has a housing and transportation problem. It is very important that they recruit new labor from the neighborhood, since importing people who have to find housing space would be almost impossible and might even lead to serious health conditions from overcrowding. After the meeting, we went back to spend the night with my cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Alsop. They have closed a large part of the house, because Mrs. Alsop says she could not bear it with so much of the family gone. Their three sons are in the services and their daughter is married. They have a charming Russian couple living in the house, and the man not only does his job all day, but works four nights a week for six hours in an aircraft factory. We were up early this morning and are now, at 8:45, about to drive to the University of Connecticut. I am very anxious to see the kind of work which is done here in preparation for work on farms during the summer.

Wood-Gas Cars Wanted In Sections of India

Motor cars using wood-gas are multiplying in India as a result of action taken by the war transport department in New Delhi to insure adequate supplies of iron and steel for the manufacture of producer-gas equipment. Approximately 7,000 vehicles have been converted to producer-gas, and demands for equipment have increased so much that manufacturers find it difficult to get needed supplies of iron and steel. Central and provincial governments have taken steps to speed up and regulate output of charcoal. The forest authorities are making tests to find the woods most suitable for charcoal and to determine best methods of production.

Your Horoscope for Today

By ALICE DENTON JENNINGS, Noted Atlanta Astrologist

What today means to you if you were born between: March 21-April 19 (ARIES)—Your judgments, especially in connection with financial affairs, close relatives and written matters, should be unusually good today. The evening hours suggest concentrated attention only to pleasures and recreation, but suggest special care around liquids and oil. April 20-May 20 (TAURUS)—Before 3 p. m. a great deal may be accomplished if routine is followed. Proceed deliberately and do not take new action previous to this time. Between 3 p. m. and 6:24 p. m. is the most favorable period of the day, when you can deal advantageously with bankers and brokers in financial interests. May 21-June 20 (GEMINI)—The day favors dealings with people who are responsible and trustworthy and you should make steady progress in matters that concern your personal welfare. New affairs started today will have a tendency to be carried out systematically and aggressively. June 21-July 22 (CANCER)—This will be a very favorable day for plans that involve financial matters. Before 8:53 a. m. many of your ideas will be worth putting to the test of experience, for you will be filled with considerable intuition. July 23-August 22 (LEO)—Avoid a feeling of wastefulness, or a desire to undertake obligations that are more than you can afford, particularly before 10:02 a. m. You should strongly curb at this time any financial. After that time favors new plans and work that demands agreeableness.

August 23-September 22 (VIRGO)—The entire day suggests that you control yourself and act with caution and discretion, for the predominating influences are such that easily may bring disputes and arguments and impulsive speech. The period does not especially favor new beginnings. September 23-October 22 (LIBRA)—Before 11:28 a. m. does not favor clear understandings with others. Speculations and speculative ideas may sound most alluring, but they are without profit. In your personal life, you will likely feel anxious and suspicious. October 23-November 21 (SCORPIO)—Crowd your important affairs before 11:22 a. m., as the best vibrations of the day operate at this time. The afternoon and evening hours suggest that you carefully investigate in financial matters. An excellent day to stick to routine matters. The best aspects of the day operate between 11:10 a. m. and 2:30 p. m. November 22-December 21 (SAGITTARIUS)—Some adjustments may have to be made before 12:04 noon, for it will be easy to go to extremes of action. If calmness and poise are maintained, this will be a favorable period for work requiring quickness of action, otherwise antagonisms may abound. December 22-January 19 (CAPRICORN)—The period does not appear to be a favorable time for indulging in financial extravagance. An excellent day to stick to routine matters. The best aspects of the day operate between 11:10 a. m. and 2:30 p. m. January 20-February 18 (AQUARIUS)—The entire day suggests new and important undertakings. You may have the opportunity to accomplish something toward your highest ideals today and until 10:42 p. m. Goodwill and co-operation should be more easily obtained. February 19-March 20 (PISCES)—The hours previous to 4:33 p. m. favor all matters where an active mind is required. An especially good period for creative work, such as literature and art. Between 11:17 a. m. and 3:05 p. m. use care in written matters of all kinds.

Graham Discusses Changes In Post-War Hollywood

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, March 24.—When this war is over and the boys come marching home—to Hollywood—what place will there be for them in pictures? How will they fit into a postwar Hollywood? And will they want to? The reality of experience has little to do with life as it is lived here.

Stirling Hayden, for example. Will he come back when the fighting is over? Marine Hayden left Hollywood many months before Pearl Harbor. He said he didn't like the tinsel glitter of the place and would never return. If he changes his mind (which would be only at the prompting of his wife, Madeleine Carroll, and I don't think she will prompt him), Hollywood would welcome him back. There is still a long future for Stirling in pictures.

But how about Tony Martin, who was recently in a spot of trouble regarding his enlistment in the Navy? Martin, as soon as he was able, reported for induction in the Army. But I still think his future in films has a big question mark.

Low Ayres, who has also rehabilitated himself with service in the Medical Corps, has stated that he will not return here after the war. George Montgomery says the same, but I think he will come back to work out the remainder of his fat contract at 20th Century-Fox. Lieutenant Robert Montgomery will probably sidestep his Hollywood career after the war and devote himself to politics, his real love. In any case, there will be no more drawing-room comedies with Bob.

Lieutenant Jimmy Stewart, of the Army Air Corps, was one of the first filmlets to be called by the draft. He went willingly, but I think he will return yet more willingly to Hollywood. Whether he can pick up his career where he left it off is another question. Jimmy is now around 35—and even the conservatives think the war will be another two years. Will Jimmy be able to play the Boy Scout type of role that made him famous in the past? He was the sort of Boy Scout before, in the way that Gary Cooper still is. The blood, thunder and prosaic reality of war is liable to change him. And then he'd want to play more mature screen roles.

Another thing, will there be room in pictures for all the returning screen stars? As each man is called to service some other man or an old-timer gets an opportunity to make good or keep going. We men like Sonny Tufts, Orson Welles, Don Ameche, Kent Taylor, Errol Flynn, Walter Pidgeon, Humphrey Bogart, George Sanders, Eddie Lowe, Spencer Tracy and Van Johnson be able to hold their own in screenland when the boys in khaki and navy come back? After all, there are only so many pictures made a year, and the supply of men will exceed the demand after the war.

The younger men in the services will probably have a better chance of re-establishing themselves than the older film actors. Although boys of the Clark Gable caliber will always be popular, no matter how old they get or how long the war lasts.

But even for the now-absent topnotchers of filmland, there is some cause for apprehension regarding the resumption of postwar screen work. Unlike other trades, movie stardom does not depend on how experienced you are or how much toil you put into it. A way of smiling, a simple, a bold glance (a la Gable) are sometimes the most important factor toward screen success. And definitely important is the reaction of millions of 15-year-old girls and boys in the theater. And the said adolescents have a sad way of forgetting people who are too long absent from the screen.

Variations for Basic Dress

Thrift is the most fashionable word in wartime America. A woman whose man is fighting this war is thinking in terms not of what she can buy, but how she can utilize the clothes she has already. In the accompanying photographs a basic navy blue crepe dress, last year's, perhaps, is brought charmingly up-to-date by a change of accessories which can be crocheted in odd hours at home. Free instructions come with the thread.

For the name of the Atlanta store where crocheted thread is available, call Winifred Ware, Wa. 6565, or write in care of The Constitution.

1. A cotton crocheted jacket in turquoise blue made from 10 balls of thread, dressing the basic frock up for a date. Instructions No. PC1220. Cost of material about $2.00.

2. Here's the French beret and matching scarf in pink for street wear. Hat and scarf are No. PC1221. The gloves instructions are No. PC1187. Cost of material about $1.25.

3. A hat and bag in green gives the dress a dinner-date smartness. The instructions for this set are No. PC1222. Cost of materials about $1.50.

How To Trim Your Hips And Look Well in Slacks

By Ida Jean Kain.

There is a new ruling at one of our leading universities. The pudgy girls can't wear slacks on the campus. And now every woman in the country wants to know what "pudgy" means?

The house committee in charge of enforcing this new rule didn't say where they draw the line between curves and pudginess. But I can tell you what it takes for a girl to look right in slacks. First of all, she has to be within 10 per cent of the weight that is normal for her frame. Then she must have a trim waistline that measures at least eight inches less than the bust, and hips that do not measure more than two inches larger than the bust. If you have that kind of figure you can wear slacks—or shorts—beautifully!

I have not had the chance to look over those particular campus queens. Most of them probably won't have to worry about their weight. But if they run true to the average, they will have to take up extra-curricular exercise and slim down to wear slacks.

The correctives are rolling, kicking and leg swinging. The rolling should be straight across the beam. Lie full length on the floor and roll across the back from side to side, for 25 counts. Then do a right angle roll—lie on your back with legs straight up in air at a right angle with the trunk, then roll over on the right side, come back to starting position, and roll over on the left side.

Stay on the floor and do a variation of the old side-scissors. Keep the under leg still and swing the upper leg out in front for momentum, then away up and out in back. With each backward swing you should feel a perceptible tightening of the muscles on the back of the hips. Repeat for 25 counts on one side, then for the same number on the other side.

To kick to the best advantage of your hips, stand erect with feet parallel. Tighten the muscles on the back of the hips, and thrust the leg backward from the hip in a short, staccato movement. Continue for 25 counts with the same leg, rest, and perform with the other leg.

For humps on the side of the hips, stand erect, feet parallel. Keep your right knee straight, and push the leg upward, turn the toes out, and swing to the side. Come back to position, and swing again.

Those measures are guaranteed to slim your hips. But you can have slim hips and still not look right in slacks. The trouble may be the material. The soft, clingy fabrics that outline the bulges should be relegated to the boudoir! When you buy your slacks, make sure that the material is the kind that holds its own shape.

Edwin Strawbridge To Come To Atlanta as Guest Teacher

By SALLY FORTH.

ATLANTANS BECAME devoted fans of Edwin Strawbridge and his ability as a dancer when he appeared for several seasons in the Hettie Jane Dunaway Gardens near Newnan. So it will be good news to them that he is to be here for a period of six weeks.

Mr. Strawbridge is scheduled to arrive in the city on Friday, April 16, as guest teacher at Sarah Wagstaff Rogers' studio at Buckhead. And although he is one of the greatest exponents of the dance, he has agreed to teach not only the grown-ups, but the little tots as well. In fact, he and Mrs. Rogers have planned a beginners' class in ballet, which no child is too small to enter. Then there will be a class in advanced ballet—a professional class—and a class in movement essential for stage training. And here's good news for feminine Atlantans who lead a busy, hectic life. There will be a class for women based on relaxation and rhythmic movement to keep one healthy, attractive, and young.

Mr. Strawbridge will start on a southern tour on March 30 with his popular "Ballets of the United Nations," which include an English, a Slavic, a Chinese, and an American ballet. He will visit Valdosta on April 2, Jacksonville on April 3, Vicksburg on April 4, and Marion, Ala. He will conclude his tour with a concert in Greensboro, N. C., on April 12, and from there he will come direct to Atlanta.

The famous dancer has been engaged to direct and stage the dances for the Memphis summer opera, so he will go to Memphis the first week in June, directly after he closes his Atlanta engagement.

THE DAY before the birthday anniversary of Mrs. Henry Grady Jr. last month, a friend chanced to meet her in a grocery store on Peachtree street. She was watching a leg of lamb being trimmed and made ready for cooking. When the friend beheld the lamb, she stood awestruck, for it had been so many weeks since she had had such a rare treat.

When Mrs. Grady opened her bag to pay the grocer, she proudly said to her friend: "You know I had some money given me to buy a birthday gift and there was nothing I could think of that I wanted quite so much as a leg of lamb. Under the circumstances, I feel that it is quite appropriate."

THERE'LL be suspense aplenty in the air tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock at the North Fulton High school auditorium when the Senior Class presents its annual play, for this year the seniors are giving a mystery, "The Case of the Laughing Dwarf." According to reports, it's a real thriller, and the director, Miss Pauline Laker, cut the last three pages from the script so the young players themselves would wonder for days just "who done it." They've finally been allowed to see those last pages and Sally knows all who see the interesting play will be as consumed with curiosity as the young actors were for many days.

Taking part in the play will be Gladney Holder, Margot Bennett, Keith Thomas, Myrle Grove, Emily Nichol, Roy Yantis, Emily Alexander, Nancy Shelton, Tom Sharp, Carl Nix, Helen Shulhaser and Robert Smith. Junell Sparks is prompter for the cast, and Rebecca Yeargan is business manager.

DO YOU KNOW? That a group of college men who have been close friends for years will all have to report for classification on Friday at the reception center at Fort McPherson for Army duty? . . . and that they include Bill Swanson, John Westmoreland Jr., Ed Gay, all of Emory; Phil Sherry, and A. Bond, of Tech; and Bill Monroe, of Auburn? . . . That Russell Bridges Jr., who has been on duty on the west coast, has been transferred to Harvard for additional training, and his brother, Ralph Bridges, who has been stationed in Florida, has been ordered to Princeton University? . . . and that they have not seen each other for more than a year, and are now within "calling" distance? . . . That Catherine Tift, who attends Sweet Briar College, will take part in the college horse show in the late spring? . . . That Jane Osburn (Mrs. Edward Manning) Chapman and her young daughter, Jane, will reside with the former's mother, Mrs. I. J. Osburn, when Ed answers his country's call to duty? . . . That Mrs. Nedon Angier Jr., the former Gloria Wolff, was named Gloria because she was born on Easter Sunday? . . . That when Bessie Mitchell (Mrs. H. Clay Jr.) Moore invited Evelyn Knox (Mrs. Cecil) Powell, of Jacksonville, Fla., to have luncheon with her at her Montclair drive home, Mrs. Francis Block and Margaret Block sent Bessie gorgeous red carnations from their garden to form the floral decoration for the table?

A book of defense stamps was the club's gift to Mrs. L. C. Fitts, retiring president. Current books of interest to gardeners were discussed by Miss Mary Ann Kernan, of Carnegie library. She reviewed "Southern Harvest," by Clare Leighton, illustrated with engravings by the author; "Historic Gardens of England," by Lady Rockley; "Gardens and Gardening" and others.

It was recommended and passed that, because of the present emergency, such new committees be created as would facilitate the club's co-operation in war work. They include civic and war work, Red Cross, and a clearing board to function for the duration. Annual reports were read by all standing committees.

T. E. L. Class Group Hears Mrs. Harris.

Mrs. Gertrude Harris, past president of the Business and Professional Women's Club of Atlanta, was guest speaker at Druid Hills Baptist church recently when the business and professional women of the T. E. L. class held a meeting.

In keeping with the emphasis being placed on women's place in present day activities, Mrs. Harris spoke on the co-operation women are giving in every branch of civilian defense, with a question and answer feature in conclusion. A devotional was brought by Mr. G. C. Barrow who spoke on "Sowing and Reaping." Mrs. Millie Edwards, chairman of the personal service group, gave a complete report of the work of the group in visiting at Grady hospital and in serving in many community enterprises.

Miss Wynne Askew's "roup serve the supper." W. L. Halverstadt, director of the citizens' service division corps of Atlanta, was guest speaker for the class on Sunday morning. World Police Plan To Face Senate Study

Connally Promises Full Review for Post-war Schemes.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—(AP) The Senate Foreign Relations Committee acted today to assure what Chairman Connally, Democrat, Texas, promised would be "prompt, thorough and earnest" consideration of a half dozen proposals on postwar world problems.

The committee directed Connally to appoint an eight-member subcommittee, which he will head, to study and report on a series of resolutions. These include a proposal by Senators Ball, Republican, Minnesota; Burton, Republican, Ohio; Hill, Democrat, Alabama; and Hatch, Democrat, New Mexico, that the United States take the initiative in organizing the United Nations for action designed ultimately to preserve peace through joint military force.

Connally told reporters later in a statement, framed by the aid of Democratic leader Barkley, of Kentucky, that the committee and subcommittee "purpose to give prompt, thorough and earnest consideration to the whole matter and bring it (the subcommittee's) conclusions to the attention of the full committee at the earliest possible date."

The chairman said he would name the subcommittee shortly and it would decide whether to hold public hearings. Connally indicated that the committee, a view apparently shared by Senator Vandenberg, Republican, Michigan.

Ball, who has urged open hearings, said sponsors ought to have the benefit of a public record, at least of the views of the State, War and Navy Departments.

Meanwhile, Representative Woodruff, Republican, Michigan, told the house that the United States had better keep alert, just as Winston Churchill was doing for England, if it did not want to be "sucked out of the peace."

Southern Coal Operators Balk At UMW Plan

NEW YORK, March 24.—(AP) Partial coal production in the Appalachian soft coal fields for 30 days after March 31 was assured today when northern operators accepted a United Mine Workers' proposal to limit wage negotiations to 30 days after expiration of a current contract on that date.

Southern operators, however, rejected the union's proposal and countered with one calling for observance of President Roosevelt's message asking that negotiations and work continue on a retroactive basis, regardless of the length of time taken to draft new contracts.

Meanwhile, John L. Lewis, international president of the UMW, announced at a general conference that he had advised President Roosevelt that progress was being made in the contract negotiations.

He said the statement was contained in the union's argument to the President's request that coal production not stop regardless of the status of the negotiations on March 31. Lewis said the White House would have to release the contents of his answer to the President.

The union head also said the organization's policy committee had approved the agreement reached today with the northern group which carries a retroactive clause.

This was the 12th day of negotiations for a new agreement between 450,000 soft coal miners and coal operators. The union has demanded, among other things, a $2 a day increase and an $8 daily minimum, and unionization of supervisory employees below the rank of superintendent.

NEW YORK, March 24.—(AP)—Industrial shares made their third straight advance today and while gains were in fractions there were few minus signs among leaders in that division of the stock market.

Other sections about broke even, although miscellaneous specialties were among those reaching new high levels for the year or longer.

Curb prices were mixed, Electric Bond & Share coming back at the last to finish 1-8 higher, Arkansas Natural Gas "A" and Lake Shore Mines adding fractions while Sunray Oil and Pennrod slipped. Transfers here were 267,920 against 238,950 yesterday.

Textiles Output Held Essential
WASHINGTON, March 24.—(AP) Production of cotton, woolen, silk, linen and other textiles for military and naval use is listed as an essential activity by the War Relocation Authority.

The commission holds, however, that this does "not necessarily mean that all establishments engaged in that activity are essential" and that each decision must be made on an individual basis.

In illustration, the WRC said that "although the manufacture of cotton textiles is included in the list of essential activities, that part of a plant's production destined for use of the Army or for the manufacture of civilian work clothing would be considered non-essential."

The manufacture of cotton goods for civilian dress clothing would not meet any of the prescribed criteria of essentiality.

STUDEBAKER MEN HERE.

K. B. Elliott, vice president of the Studebaker Corporation, and M. S. Brooks, assistant to the vice president, were in Atlanta yesterday for a special conference with Studebaker's factory field representatives throughout the seven southeastern states. This meeting is being held under the direction of Paul R. Davis, Studebaker's southeastern regional manager, in the regional offices in the Rhodes-Haverty building.

Thursday Mr. Elliott and Mr. Brooks will meet with Studebaker dealers from the principal cities in Alabama, Tennessee, Georgia, Florida, North and South Carolina. These dealers are now operating service stations for essential cars and trucks which are so vitally essential to the war effort. This conference is to be held at the Capital City Club.

Mr. Elliott and Mr. Brooks are being entertained at an informal gathering at the Capital City Club this afternoon to meet some of Atlanta's leading business men.

The Studebaker Corporation is the nation's largest producer of aircraft engines outside of the aviation industry, according to Mr. Elliott.

Studebaker is producing cylinder engines for the Flying Fortress under license from the Wright Aeronautical Corporation. This, however, is only a part of its war assignments. In all it has a total of ten government contracts covering military trucks and other materiel.

The company's shipments of war materiel in 1942 will approximate $2,500,000, according to Mr. Elliott, and ship costs in 1943 promise to rise to between $350,000-$400,000.

ATLANTA, GA., MARCH 25, 1943.

No Easy Victory

Evidence daily mounts to prove that the extreme optimists who dream of victory over the Axis, and end of the war, this year are woefully wrong. Such weakly based hopes are, in fact, dangerous if voiced aloud. They tend to tempt uninformed individuals among us to slacken in the war effort and to fatuously imagine it is nearly all over "save the shouting."

Winston Churchill in his radio speech of Sunday should have successfully countered these false optimists when he said he only hoped for victory over Germany in 1944, and it could quite easily be delayed until 1945.

British sources which have made a careful survey of all available information on German strength, warn that there is, as yet, no sign of cracking in the German war machine. The Nazis are so strong that any early end of the war is out of the question.

Yet, these same sources concede, the breakdown of German war strength will come suddenly, when it does come. There will be little if any advance warning of the eventual collapse.

Russia may be able to smash German power in the east this year. Rommel and his armies will, almost certainly, be out of Africa within the next two or, at most, three months. Even with these successes, however, the United Nations will still be far from victory.

There is the war with the enemy U-boats still to win. And there is still to be cracked the fortress of defense Germany has built, and is still building, inside Europe.

We cannot expect early victory. No more can we expect easy victory. It will only be after long-drawn struggle, with inevitable heavy casualties and many temporary setbacks, that the day will at last come when our troops may march through the shambles that once was Berlin and lift the enslaved peoples of Europe out of involuntary bondage to their inhuman Nazi masters.

Georgia Manganese

A dream for decades old may come true, because of the war, in the Cartersville section of Georgia. According to Director Garland Peyton, of the Georgia Division of Mines, Mining and Geology, tests are now being made on the manganese iron ore deposits there with a view, if there is sufficient tonnage to warrant, that large-scale production of the manganese ore will be launched.

There is little, if any doubt in the minds of Georgians from that part of the state that the deposits of manganese ore are more than ample to justify whatever expenditure is involved in getting it out. The known vein of the ore is said to be a mile wide and ten miles long.

There is urgent need for manganese, which is used for hardening steel, since the mounting demands of war have made heavier and heavier demands on former sources of supply. The United States used to import the vital commodity from Canada, but Canadian and British war demands are now taking the bulk output of Canadian mines. Some comes from Brazil, in so far as shipping limitations permit.

It is planned, if the present tests near Cartersville prove satisfactory, to seek erection of a $100,000 plant for the purifying of the ore. Small-scale mining has been conducted in the past, but the raw ore has had to be shipped to Birmingham for refining to meet standard specifications.

If such a plant is erected, it will bring to Georgia another important industry which, provided there is sufficient ore, would probably continue operation after the war, for peacetime industry. It means, in any event, an important contribution, industrially and economically, to the Cartersville area and, hence to all of northwest Georgia.

Financial Statement

There has been widespread criticism of organized labor groups for alleged failure to make financial statements, to give public accounting of their incomes from initiation fees and membership dues and of their expenditures of these moneys.

In some cases this criticism is justified. There is, even, a move in congress to make such statements mandatory at set intervals.

The criticism, however, can hardly apply to one of the strongest CIO affiliates, the United Steelworkers of America, better known, perhaps, as the SWOC. This is the union of which Philip Murray, head of the entire CIO, is president.

There has recently been published the audit report of the United Steelworkers of America for the seven-month period from May 1 to November 30, 1942. The report is made by Main & Company, well-known firm of accountants and auditors of Pittsburgh, Pa. This company has been employed as auditor of the union accounts from the start and set up the bookkeeping system not only for the parent union but for local affiliates.

The financial statement shows an excess of resources over liabilities, in the union treasury, of $1,774,905, a reasonable balance for any organization of the size and extent of the SWOC.

An interesting sidelight is found in the report on salaries paid as international office expense for the seven-month period. Four international officers received, all told, only $30,250; total salaries for 44 general office employees was $56,802; a legal staff of three persons was paid $7,487; a publicity staff of four received only $8,854, while the research staff of 7 was paid $11,473. No excessive salaries are shown in such a report.

It is unnecessary here to analyze the dry statistics of any financial report. Suffice it to say there can be no ground for criticism in the financial statement of the SWOC and, of course, the mere issuance of such a statement immediately renders charges of financial secrecy baseless, in so far as this union is concerned.

The MCWR

Ask a member of the Marine Corps Women's Reserves for a nickname for her organization, similar to the WAAC, WAVES or SPARS, and she will tell you MCWR "and make a word out of that, if you can—it hasn't a vowel in it."

Then, with a serious look in her eye, she will tell you she and her sisters of the corps will be satisfied and proud if they can so conduct themselves in the uniform, if they can so contribute to the cause of victory they can be called worthy of the title "Marine." That is all. That is all they want. They would sooner prove themselves worthy of the name "Marine" than be called anything else.

The MCWR, then, will be a competent and efficient organization, if the example and the hopes of Major Ruth Cheney Streeter, its commander, prove reliable. In Atlanta this week, Major Streeter revealed herself as a real soldier and spoke of the plans for the Corps in a way that filled her hearers with enthusiasm.

Even tough, old Marine officers, she said, are seeing the light and are ready to welcome the feminine Marines in places where they can serve.

The MCWR wants 18,000 enlisted personnel and 1,000 officers. Age limits are between 20 and 38, married women are not barred but women with children less than 18 years old are. And there is no bar against marriage of an MCWR after completion of her "boot" course, even no bar to marriage with a Marine.

As a way for service to the nation's cause, the MCWR offers grand opportunity to girls who can meet requirements and it offers, too, a chance to become a member of a military organization, such fame that for all lifetime afterwards it will be a source of pride to be able to say, "I am an ex-Marine!"

Georgia Editors Say:

RATIONING UNTIL IT HURTS

(From The Moultrie Observer.)

The restraint will be off of automobile owners now. They can take their cars out and go as far as they please on a gallon and a half of gasoline. Before this it has been a matter of conscience. OPA has been telling us we have to decide for ourselves when we were within the limits of good behavior in the matter of driving our cars. Now we can drive them without a conscience just so we do not use but a gallon and a half a week.

The "A" card man has been cut pretty low. Some of them will find that this is rationing until it hurts. If it applied to everybody the "A" card man would probably be willing to carry his burden without complaint. The "A" card crowd, however, is a group that is growing and smaller all of the while. The commercial people with trucks and buses and cabs go on merrily. The government employees, almost as thick as fleas, are enabled to get more gas. Army camps continue their supply. Job holders in cities, counties and the state are still able to get gasoline. They have recently ruled that all farmers, which is more than 50 per cent of our Georgia population, can have gas. Laborers, doctors, schools, etc., get more gas. Who is it that is left in the "A" card group? It looks like that number is now so small that no great amount of gasoline will be saved by reducing the ration from three gallons to a gallon and a half a week.

WASHINGTON PARADE

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

CHANGE IN STRATEGY WASHINGTON, March 24.—Although the "third-term" issue would seem to have been disposed of once and for all by the lopsided returns of the 1940 elections, it is being raised again in a novel form as a means of preventing President Roosevelt from serving a fourth term.

Mr. Roosevelt's opponents are now proposing that the various states make application to congress, through their respective legislatures, for calling a constitutional convention, to which would be submitted an amendment to the organic law limiting a president to two terms of four years each.

Under the terms of the constitution such procedure is permissible. Congress is required to call a constitutional convention when two-thirds of the state legislatures make application for such a convocation.

Four states have already acted to this end in fact. They are Illinois, Iowa, Indiana and Michigan, in all of which Republican legislatures are in control. Similar resolutions have been introduced in the legislatures of Nebraska, Missouri and Colorado.

The primary hope of those back of the movement is, of course, that such an amendment can be added to the constitution in time to head off Mr. Roosevelt from being a four-term candidate. Having learned that they can't beat Mr. Roosevelt at the polls, his enemies are now resorting to legal devices to disqualify him from further White House service.

MIGHT NOT STAND It is doubtful, however, that an amendment of the kind would stand the test of the supreme court, as applied to any sitting President, even if it were adopted by the necessary number of states.

Some constitutional authorities hold that the high court would be sure to throw it out because of its retroactive features. If the proposed amendment applied only to future Presidents, without taking into account past terms which a chief executive might have served, there would be no question about its legality, of course.

But, as aimed at Mr. Roosevelt, there is something about it that smacks too much of a law that makes a crime of an act committed before the law was passed.

CAN'T RETRACT Under our system of government we can pass any kind of a law covering everything from prohibiting to kissing your wife in public—and enforce it, after a measure. But you can't pass a law making something a crime that happened before the law was enacted. The supreme court stands guard against tyrannies of that sort.

Somehow the proposed constitutional injunction against Mr. Roosevelt and his four-term plan seems to fall in the same category.

Another reason to believe the enemies of the President are pursuing a false trail is that seven of the nine members of the highest tribunal were appointed by Mr. Roosevelt, not counting Harlan F. Stone, who was elevated to the chief justiceship under the New Deal administration.

If the question were made enough to invite any division of opinion the President would seem to have friends enough on the court to decide things his way.

ANOTHER BLOCK The final note of futility about the enterprise is the necessity for gaining a two-thirds majority in congress for the next year, when he made no announcement of his plans prior to the actual meeting of the Democratic convention. He may be expected to follow the same course with respect to a fourth term.

In the first place, war events are too uncertain to permit him to make any declaration of his plans, even if he had any. The political situation may be such a year hence that he will not want another term. On the other hand, we may be at such a crucial stage of the war that public sentiment will demand that he carry on until the bloody business and the problems of peace are put behind us.

No one is soothsayer enough to tell what the conditions may be. Mr. Roosevelt can only wait and make his decision on the circumstances that exist at the time.

PROBABLE PROGRAM The best guess on how Mr. Roosevelt will handle the problem is that he will follow the pattern of 1940, when he made no announcement of his plans prior to the actual meeting of the Democratic convention. He may be expected to follow the same course with respect to a fourth term.

In the first place, war events are too uncertain to permit him to make any declaration of his plans, even if he had any. The political situation may be such a year hence that he will not want another term. On the other hand, we may be at such a crucial stage of the war that public sentiment will demand that he carry on until the bloody business and the problems of peace are put behind us.

No one is soothsayer enough to tell what the conditions may be. Mr. Roosevelt can only wait and make his decision on the circumstances that exist at the time.

Pictures Of Babies.

Proud grandmothers, with a number of grandchildren, enjoy nothing better than receiving gifts of recent photographs of said grandchildren. Especially if Fate has taken the son or daughter, proud father or mother as the case may be of the little ones, to a distant place to live.

Photographs taken at weekly intervals would, I believe, be delightfully received by grandmother. Then she could arrange them in order of arrival and carefully note the evidence of the changes that growth brings.

A new batch of snapshots of the two little granddaughters in North Carolina arrived at our house this week. Hence these reflections.

When said snapshots came it inspired a glance around the walls and on the mantel shelves and other places of vantage, and I was great is the number of photos it caused me to wonder, audibly, where any more could be placed.

For which audible comment I was properly reproved. Told that no finer decoration could be found than said "lovely babies," and also advised that if any of the pictures were not placed where they could be quickly seen by anyone entering our home, the parents of the particular young-uns would be hurt, would feel slighted.

So I promptly redeemed myself by the truthful statement that I got a great deal of enjoyment, myself, in looking at said pictures and couldn't have too many.

Which removed the immediate threat to household peace, anyway.

But There Are A Lot.

But, really, there are a lot of said photographs.

There are the pictures of our own children, all four of them, taken first when they were exceedingly young and at various stages of life afterwards. Concluding, temporarily, with the large framed photos of most recent vintage.

There is, of course, the large photograph of the son, taken shortly before he went into the Army in midsummer of 1941. And, elsewhere in the room, snapshots of him in uniform, in camp on this side of the ocean, in Ireland and in England.

As for pictures of the four granddaughters, I couldn't guess at the number. Sometimes, among the pictures of them all taken when they were so young age was measured in months, or even weeks, I find it difficult to tell which is which. With shame I admit it, but all babies of those very tender days, even my own, and their own, look much alike to me. Sometimes I have to ask which of the four posed for that particular picture.

Grandmother always knows. And there is a picture of my two eldest girls which is frequently mistaken for that of their own babies by visitors to the house.

We Sneer at Decorators.

Arty interior decorators say it is altogether wrong to have family photographs on display in the living rooms of your home. Just why it is wrong I never understood, but that's what they say and there you are.

But we say "nuts" to such decorators. We like to have pictures of the family, even of friends, where we can see them any time. We are proud of them, too, for any and all visitors to see. There can't be too many.

I sometimes think these professional decorators are sisters under the skin to fashion experts.

Did you ever see a home arranged by a professional interior decorator that was one-tenth as much like a home as one where the furniture and ornaments and odds and ends had just accumulated through years of contented family living there? Everything may violate every rule of color harmony and appropriate style, but everything has a personal history and to those who live there it is all covered with the intangible patina of home, which takes years to acquire.

And did you ever see a fashion expert who looked comfortably and humanly dressed? I didn't. They all look to me like walking illustrations of Vogue, or women who look like they frighten me. They're too artificial.

The woman who attracts—at least this is my experience—is the one who looks friendly and companionable. Which means there must be no over-emphasis on style, just sufficient to be reasonably well dressed.

In short, she must be of the type, not the stiffly starched, type. But that's a long way from baby granddaughters. But, anyway, it ends today's column—and I thank you.

Churchill On Japan

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Just at the time when China and Australia, backed by American commanders in these countries, were pressing for an immediate stepping up of the war against Japan, Prime Minister Winston Churchill has put his foot down on this move with unmistakable definiteness.

The substance of the far eastern representations, advanced particularly by Madame Chiang Kai-shek and by General George C. Kenney and Richard K. Sutherland, recently arrived from Australia, is that the time to strike Japan is now. There is no such thing, the people insist, as "merely holding" Japan; that any lull in aggressive action against her means simply that she will have time to organize offensives of her own which will cost us many lives and greatly postpone the final victory.

There is known to be a powerful faction in both the War and Navy Departments that supports this view. But now comes Mr. Churchill, declaring not only that disposal of Japan must wait until Germany and Italy are totally defeated, but that large British and American forces probably never can be mobilized in the Far East.

"The war with Japan," he said in his speech on Sunday, "will demand a very different arrangement of our forces from what it is at present. There will certainly be large numbers of British and also, no doubt, United States soldiers whom it will not be physically possible to employ across the vast distances and poor communications of the Japanese war."

However vigorously the war against Japan is prosecuted there will certainly be a partial demobilization following the defeat of Hitler.

Pleases British In making this statement Mr. Churchill undoubtedly pleases his home folks, who naturally regard Germany as their main enemy. But for President Roosevelt the problem is not so easy. Public opinion polls all have indicated that the American people regard the fight with Japan as peculiarly our phase of the war and they are anxious to get on with it.

It also is true, however, that effective American action against Japan is largely stymied until Britain has brought Russia, get ready to help us. One point upon which all Allied military and naval authorities now are agreed is that the only feasible way to get at Japan is through China.

And the only way to get sufficient supplies into China are through British India and Burma or Russia.

One of the opinions that General Kenney and Sutherland are known to have brought back from General Douglas MacArthur is that the movement against Japan by way of Australia has gone about as far as it can profitably be pressed. Australia, these generals have said, has been made safe by the successful operations in the Solomon Islands and New Guinea. They are doubtful as to the advantage of taking Rabaul or even displacing the Japanese from their strongholds of Lae and Salamaua.

Agree on Strategy Rooted out of one spot, these officers say, the Japanese simply light in another and the job of expelling them from literally hundreds of South Pacific islands, one by one, would be endless. They agree completely that the war against Japan must be fought, first, by a constant and increasing air and naval attack upon Japan's shipping lines, and second, by retaking Burma to re-establish the supply line to China.

The British answer to this is simple. The problem of retaking Burma, they say, is essentially one of shipping, since that country could be invaded effectively only by a joint land and naval force striking against its main port of Rangoon.

The Japanese, now operating from Singapore and Surabaya, the powerful former British and Dutch bases, have a distinct strategic advantage in the Bay of Bengal, which they presently control. A major Allied fleet would be required to cope with them. Also, all shipping of supplies to the Far East, excepting the small quantity sent by air, must go 15,000 miles around the African continent. Granted that the British have a large native army in India it cannot move into Burma without much greater naval support and supplies than now could be made available.

Wherefore the British argue that the key to war against Japan, even more than to war against Germany, is complete reposition of the Mediterranean sea, such as would release British naval units to employ there and re-establish the short shipping route by way of Gibraltar and Suez.

The real crux of the matter, however, is that Mr. Churchill, fully backed by Russia, believes that the important job is to whip Hitler, and so long as this position is maintained there isn't much that the United States can do about it.

wrinkle from the brow of care, or beguile the heavy heart of one moment of sadness. I am now and then, penetrate the gathering film of misanthropy, prompt a benevolent view of human nature, and make my reader more in good humor with his fellow-beings and himself, surely I shall not then have written in vain."

Better not to write at all than to write discouragingly. We should aspire to merit the praise of Job of whom it was said that his words put men on their feet.

ONE WORD MORE

ENFORCEMENT TROUBLES

Municipal officials and police can tell you some revealing little stories of why it is difficult to enforce the law in Atlanta.

In one of those night campaigns against prostitution, Atlanta police picked up some women who had been working in three of the better-class hotels. No hotel of that type wants them. They get rid of them as quickly as they discover them. But discovery is difficult. Especially is this so if the bell boys are venal.

Two or three of the women gave names of the bell boys who had supplied them with customers in the hotels. The bell boys were arrested.

Police were surprised to receive a loud squawk from the hotel managements with promises of lawyers to be hired and court defenses made in all cases. That's another story.

There is another which is best illustrated by a statement by an official high in the city government. "If ministers would preach a special sermon to their property-owning deacons we might get somewhere," said the official.

"Why?" I asked. "It goes like this," he said. "Recently we raided and arrested inmates of some of these joints in which drunks hang out and in which women of a dubious character are found. What happened? Immediately we got squawks from the property owner. Some of them are well-known names in Atlanta. They are all for law enforcement until it touches their rentals. Many of the joints are in buildings which have been allowed to go down hill until about all they will support is some hamburger or wiener or beer joint."

"The person raided reports to the property owner that he will not be able to carry on his business and pay rent if the police bother him. The property owner comes right back to police with a protest that the joint in his building may have a few prostitutes in it and a few drunks but that the owner is obeying the law and why pick on him?"

"I will be willing to supply any interested minister with the names of some of his deacons who own property which houses a joint," said the police official.

"All of this may make it easier to understand why even a good honest copper develops a very cynical attitude toward the polite resolutions which various associations pass, asking police to enforce the law and eliminate the joints," he concluded.

NOT DIFFICULT All this, of course, is old stuff to police officers. One of the worst joints in town—almost in mid-town—is controlled by a notorious character with a police record. The operator more than likely is a front for him. He has had "friends," some of them in council, come to his assistance in times of trouble. When his liquor licenses were revoked some months ago, council voted them back to him. This despite the fact he legally is not entitled to have a liquor license because of his record.

The joint which he controls is a large one and well fitted out, but it is a common joint, just the same. A lot of youngsters get into it and soldiers, with money to spend, get into it in large numbers. You can walk into it about 5 o'clock any afternoon and it will be found in a near disorderly condition.

But, no smart cop is going to arrest the manager or raid the joint as a common dive because he knows very well that the influences wouldn't like it. It wouldn't do the cop any good. This is all common knowledge to anyone familiar with the way municipal police have to work, but it always seems to surprise the average citizen.

There isn't much the mayor can do. The mayor of Atlanta has little authority. I have not been in his office since he was elected, but I would wager in his mail are squawks from property owners every time a joint in one of their buildings is raided.

A GOOD TOWN I mention all these things because Atlanta is a good, decent town with fewer joints and less crime than any other town of its size. It is a city of homes and of people who like to live in the town. It is a rotten shame that a few racketeers, of the small-fry variety, and a few men with records are allowed to have any influence.

I guess it is just as bad, and maybe worse, to have owners of run-down, shabby old buildings using their influence to protect the operator of a common joint where bums and prostitutes hang out and where innocent people and dumb kids can go if they wish. I put all this down because I don't think the mayor and the chief of police and the police themselves deserve to bear the brunt of criticism. Licenses can be revoked. And the Beer Institute can shut off a few of the glittering joints with profit.

They have learned the hard way that a great many influential persons are for law enforcement so long as it doesn't cost them anything personally. It would be really interesting to let police report who owns the properties which are operated as houses of prostitution and as common joints.

It would also be interesting to have them tell you what racketeers can whisper the name of a cop who has done his job and get him in bad. There isn't much of this sort of thing. There is less of it in this town than any other one of its size. We've got, by comparison, the cleanest town I know. But, things are getting a little worse and there isn't any reason to have what we've got. And the police—generally—are not to blame. That really is my story.

Showing Mercy to the Wolf Is Merciless to the Sheep

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

Custom makes wrong things seem right, until mankind climbs another step higher and forms a new and more decent standard. The world has always hunted down and punished bands of robbers, but warfare, which usually was robbery on a grander scale, was for ages the sport of kings and emperors, who could do no wrong.

Unless completely conquered, the war makers always went unpunished—chiefly, perhaps, because there was nobody to punish them

Dudley Glass

There is a lot to be said for vegetarianism, though it has taken me many a year to realize it. I do not wish to intrude on the province of Old Dr. Brady, whose column adorns another page. So I shall not in-dorse grass, hay, spinach and potatoes as health builders. I shall speak of them merely as satisfiers for a hungry man.

All these years, since being weaned at an early age, I have been a carnivorous animal. A meal to me was meat—with whatever fixings the hostess, the waitress or the chef thought suitable. If consulted about what I'd like with my steak I'd reply: "French fried. And a portion of fried onions."

My diet was steak, roast beef, ham—and occasionally a batch of liver. With onions, of course. Liver is a twin brother of onions. They are as inseparable as ham and eggs. Scotch and soda or, if you insist on being cultural, "Cavallier Rusticana" and "Pagliacci."

But I am somewhat choosy about my meat. I have never been able to go for chuck steak, rib roast, pot roast, Irish stew or other delicacies compiled from what butchers used to throw into the alley for the neighborhood dogs. A dog, I might say in passing, would expire from malnutrition on what a slaughterhouse throws away these days.

'Just Off the Boat'

Good steaks are out, it seems, for the duration. I am hoping that some day a wealthy friend with an invite to dinner will drop in with an invitation to dinner and whisper: "We'll have two-inch steaks. My confidential agent has just flown up from the A. Gentine and smuggled them through. Remember that Scotch we used to get off the ship from Liverpool?"

It's good meat for me, or none. So I am learning to enjoy vegetables. I always went strong for potatoes and tomatoes and I could take cabbage when deodorized. I am now learning the delights of black-eyed peas and renewing my boyhood fondness for a hot sweet potato stuffed with butter.

Did I say butter? Sorry, I didn't mean to bring that up. So I think I'll be a vegetarian—if we can get any vegetables.

Oh yes, I know, before you start writing—that people in England and Greece and the Solomon Islands would rejoice at having our rationed food. And that's right. I agree with you before you start. And if they need my potatoes and peas they're welcome.

But that doesn't keep me from wondering along in the shank of the evening, what we're going to have for supper. Fourth choice of meat? Well, that's all right. I don't have to eat the meat with a dog yelping from the back porch. The gravy is grand—and almost any cut of meat will make good gravy.

Maybe It's True
South Georgia hasn't given up hopes of striking oil, despite futile efforts a few years ago in Pierce county.

What's more important, the great oil producing companies still hope—and are backing their hopes with men in the field. Drilling for oil costs money. These companies have made and lost millions on experiments. They must think they have something. Let's hope so.

C. W. Deming, chairman for years of the oil and gas committee of the Waycross Chamber of Commerce, reports activity in his region by several big oil companies, which he names, in the region around Nahunta and Black-shear. They are buying leases, after numerous scientific surveys. Their experiments extend to Cairo, all the way from the Atlantic coast to the Alabama line. Actual drilling will follow the lease—if the tests indicate oil. Who knows but that region may some day be covered with derricks?

Me for Vegetables For the Duration; If I Can Get Vegetables

But don't kid yourself about driving your car from here to there. Oil wells don't produce gasoline. There are several steps between crude oil and the stuff that passes through your carburetor.

Matter of the Moon
Several days ago, availing myself of the privilege of ignorance, I ventured to doubt the insidious influence of the inconstant moon on the planting and raising of vegetables. My life has been a burden since then. My mail stacks up and my telephone rings like a five-alarm fire. With proof positive that the phases of the moon do affect crops, just as do fertilizer and rains and drought.

Let me choose just one from my critics, Thomas H. Goodwin, attorney-at-law and sometime candidate for mayor of our fair city, if you remember that far back. "The moon makes every difference in the world," avers Mr. Goodwin, who was born on a farm and lived there until he acquired sense enough to move to town.

"Things that grow underground—I mean things that produce their crops underground—should be planted on dark nights. No, I don't mean they should be planted at night—but in the daytime when nights are dark—if you get what I mean. Such as potatoes and peanuts. Otherwise you'll get a lot of plant above ground and nothing in the soil, if you get what I mean."

"On the other hand, corn and hay and everything that's harvested above ground should be planted in the full of the moon. If you don't, you'll get a lot of stalks in the case of corn—and no ears except nubbins. And I know whereof I speak."

So let's let it go at that. The subject is closed. Any further communications should be addressed to the State Department of Agriculture.

Chinese Hurl Back 4,000 Japanese

CHUNGKING, March 24.—(AP)—In a fresh operation some 150 miles northwest of Nanking, Chinese forces made substantial gains in attacks Sunday on Japanese positions in the vicinity of Sushien, trunk line railway town in north Anhwei province, the Chinese high command said today.

With more than 10 tanks forming their spearhead, more than 4,000 Japanese retailed with attacks from several directions, attempting to encircle the Chinese, but were repulsed in an all-day battle, a communique said.

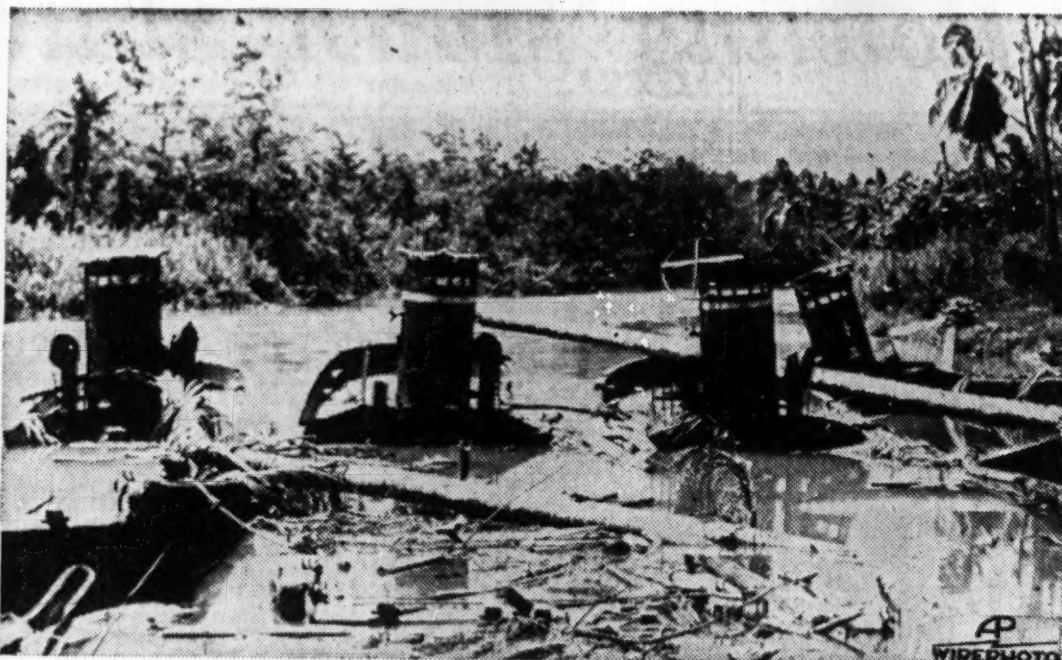

The Japanese were stated to have suffered more than 200 casualties. The Chinese operation represented one of many made periodically in an attempt to hamper communications on the Tientsin-Pukow railway.

Many Soldiers Turn To Prayer, One Writes

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. VALDOSTA, Ga., March 24.—Mrs. T. J. Anthony, of this city, this week received several delayed letters from her son, Corporal Ralph B. Anthony, with the Army in North Africa.

In one of his letters Corporal Anthony said that a large percentage of the men in the Army had no hesitancy in turning to prayer frequently to carry them through the many trying experiences that are a part of their daily routine.

The corporal reported that he was well and expressed the hope that the war would soon end so he could return home.

Wade Holley Wins 7th Stay From Death

SAVANNAH, Ga., March 24.—(AP)—Wade Holley, former Augusta policeman sentenced to die in the electric chair for the 1939 killing of W. L. Beckum, Louisville, Ga., filling station operator, today had won his seventh reprieve from death.

Holley's execution was stayed yesterday by an order from Judge A. B. Lovett in United States district court, requiring the condemned man's appearance in federal court at Augusta April 15 for a hearing on a petition for a writ of habeas corpus.

The U. S. court's action followed filing of the petition by Ben E. Pierce, Holley's attorney, in which was raised the question of constitutionality of the Georgia law which provides a wife from testifying either for or against her husband. Holley's conviction in superior court of Jefferson county was illegal, the petition alleged, because the court had lost jurisdiction by refusing to grant the defendant rights guaranteed him under the 14th amendment to the United States constitution.

Columbus Explosion Injures Mother, Child

COLUMBUS, Ga., March 24.—An explosion yesterday which blew the four walls from a garage apartment on Martha loop just off the Macon road and about a mile from the city limits, seriously injured Mrs. Edwin Willard, wife of an infantry lieutenant, and their three-year-old daughter.

Cause of the explosion, which completely demolished the four-room structure, is still undetermined.

Mrs. Willard received second and third degree burns about the face, arms and body and the child has second degree burns on the face and back.

The explosion is said to have been heard by neighbors a half-mile away.

FORTUNE'S ESTIMATE.

The editors of Fortune magazine have again taken a look at the churches, and the result is a most comprehensive appraisal of "The Christian Churches in the War" in the March issue of this commanding journal.

Many of us gratefully remember an article in Fortune on the Christian churches some months ago. That article spurred many a churchman to re-examine himself and his church. The present article, I believe, will serve a similar end.

The current article discusses with insight and sympathetic understanding the points of strength and the points of weakness in the Protestant and Roman Catholic churches in their relationship to a world at war and the peace to follow, and the discussion is all the more healthy and stimulating for its complete frankness.

"This war," declares the editors of Fortune, "especially involves the Christian churches because it comes at the end of a period of very clever and powerful attacks on them. . . . To see what can be done about justice on this earth has become a principal modern task of the Christian churches. The task is really double: to renew the truth they hold, and to apply it to themselves and to society, war or peace."

An evaluation of the Roman Catholic church in America reveals as clear and fair a bit of writing as I have come upon in a long while. I regret that space restrains a full report on this vitally important section of the article. Perhaps a few quotes may best indicate the value of the article:

"The Roman Catholic church in America cannot be understood apart from Rome. . . . In retrospect the Church of Rome seems to have been preparing itself for nearly a century against the convulsions of the modern world. Since Pius IX announced the doctrine in 1870—over the misgivings of great Catholics such as Lord Acton—the pope has been held by Roman Catholics to be incapable of error in his ex cathedra utterances to the world on Christian faith and morals. Papal infallibility was the latest and most astonishing in a long line of bold de-

Danish Vote Places Nazis Low in Favor

Is Smashing Evidence of Nation's Thirst for Democracy.

STOCKHOLM, March 24.—(AP)—The Danish people, smarting under the yoke of the occupying Germans gave a smashing demonstration for democracy as the count came in today from yesterday's parliamentary elections.

With more than 90 per cent of the electorate going to the polls, the five dominant parties—united on a platform of national unity and the principals of free national democracy—polled 362,000 more votes than in the last election in 1939.

The Danish Nazi party, despite the backing of the German invaders, gained only 12,000 votes over its 1939 total of 31,032—a comparatively insignificant proportion of the total cast.

Some Nazis had called on the electorate to abstain from voting, while Norwegian authorities had called on the citizens to "appear and vote." Fifteen per cent more voters appeared than in the previous election.

Official results of the election showed the Conservative party of Christian Moe, political leader now in Great Britain, polled 421,051 votes compared with 301,625 in 1939; Social Democrats 894,636 against 729,619; Liberals 376,463 against 309,055; Radical party 175,025 compared with 161,839; the Right Union 31,185 compared with 33,783.

Doerun Flying Ace Receives Air Medal

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. MOUTRIE, Ga., March 24.—Captain Clyde Sloumb, Doerun flying ace with the United States Army Air Force in China, Monday had the Distinguished Flying Cross pinned on him by Brigadier General Claire Chennault. The Distinguished Flying Cross supplements the Silver Star which he was awarded several weeks ago for breaking up a Jap bombing mission bent on destroying vital military bases.

A fighting pilot, Captain Sloumb received his latest award for participating in more than 25 combat missions and three confirmed aerial victories. He is credited with downing an A-97 Japanese bomber on November 2 as one of his major feats.

Captain Sloumb is the son of Dr. and Mrs. C. B. Sloumb, of Doerun. He is the second Colquitt county boy to receive the distinguished medal. R. C. (Moose) Moss, flying ace, being the other.

20,000 Tons of Tung Oil Nuts Grown in U. S. To Aid War

CAIRO, Ga., March 24.—(AP)—A few trees brought from China 40 years ago and seedlings grown from them will produce some 20,000 tons of tung oil nuts that will be used in vital war materials this year.

Tung oil, extracted from the nuts is so important to a number of war industries that the government froze the entire supply. The oil is used in water-proofing materials, quick drying paints and newsprint ink. Gum from the oil provides a protective film insoluble in practically all solvents and highly resistant to water and oil. It is used in making linoleum, oil cloth, automobile top dressings and similar materials.

Before the war halted importation of the product, the United States brought in approximately $100,000,000 worth annually from China.

Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas now have tung tree orchards, grown from nuts of trees brought to the United States by government agencies for experimental purposes. One of the original "trees" stands on the farm of J. B. Wight near here. Wight also pioneered in the pecan industry in this section.

Field laboratories set up by the government in the southeast are concentrating on selection and breeding of strains bearing nuts of high oil content and trees that are cold resistant. The Cairo laboratory has a test orchard at Woodbury, some 50 miles south of Atlanta.

The nuts, gathered during spare time of farm workers during December and January, are marketed during the winter. They bring around $90 a ton now, compared with a pre-war figure of $40. Development of the industry in Georgia was aided by the late Owen T. Davis, local banker. He bought and planted 50,000 young trees on a number of farms he owned in this section. Georgia now has around 5,000 acres planted in tung trees, but not all of the trees are bearing. This state will produce about 3,000 tons of nuts this year.

Much Meat Is Canned

By Laurens Families
SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. DUBLIN, Ga., March 24.—During the past three months Laurens families have canned 3,955 cans of beef and pork according to Harry A. Edge, Laurens farm agent.

The plant was open here today for continued canning and one more day, Wednesday, March 31, will close the meat canning season. The plant will again be in operation when vegetables are ready for canning.

Inaugurated here early last year, the plant has been under the supervision of Edge and Miss Ophelia Smith, home demonstration agent.

Young Americans set the "grown-ups" an example in patriotism during the recent scrap collection campaign. Now their cooperation and that of every telephone user is needed in a matter equally important to the war effort.

The daily number of local and long distance telephone calls throughout the "war busy" Southeast is mounting in ever-increasing volume, seriously crowding the lines of communication vital to the war effort.

To help keep these lines clear for the essential messages of war, we urgently ask every telephone user to adopt the "Pledge of Cooperation."

All in the Game

By JACK TROY

On the Beam Cochran Field Fliers came in on the beam in the series with Fort Oglethorpe for the state service championship of Georgia. Captain Karo Whitfield's team played brilliant, heads-up basketball to overcome an Oglethorpe team that never gave up but finally wore out. Oglethorpe didn't substitute until the final game.

There has never been a better series played in Atlanta. Rarely did either team ever have more than a four-point advantage. The lead changed hands with clockwork regularity. There was never a dull moment.

Oglethorpe "blew" the championship by failing to freeze the ball in the second game. With a minute to go, the boys from a little bit south of Chattanooga kept firing away instead of protecting their lead. It cost them the title.

Billy Harmon shot two last-minute field goals to beat them.

In the championship game, Cochran took no chances with a six-point lead in the game and didn't try for a field goal in the last two minutes.

Don't ever think these teams weren't leveling. It was a series that produced a total of approximately 90 points a game. The rivalry was intense.

First night one of the teams kicked on the officiating and demanded a change. Second night the other team did the same. Three sets of officials were used under the implied threat one team or the other would not go on.

They were that serious.

And that is the Army, Mr. Jones.

From our standpoint, we were interested chiefly in the Red Cross. The basketball season was over when we offered to sponsor the series.

And still it raised a nice sum of $241.25 for the Red Cross fund.

Spirited, Indeed Claude Bond, R. L. (Shorty) Doyal, Julian Rose, Burgess Damron, Big Kitty Katz, Johnny Moon and DeWitt Spence donated their services as officials and did a bang-up job in all instances.

As an example of how spirited the Army series was, one team which had only five fouls called against it, and actually stayed in the game by shooting eight of nine fouls called against the other team, kicked on the officiating! And that includes the fact, too, that the other team had seen one of its key players foul out.

If it had been a best-three-out-of-five series, chances are we would have had to import officials.

But, of course, that is how it is with two adult teams used to winning so much.

They finally came together and haven't realized, somehow, that somebody must lose.

But it was all right. It was a fine insight-into the competitive fight of the men in the armed forces. They're out to win at whatever they're doing.

That's the way it should be. There is no such thing as a good loser in war.

The officials, donating their services, took the bouncing around good-naturedly. They knew how much each team wanted to win.

While all the changing was going on and the arguments grew heated in intensity, Claude Bond laughed on the sidelines.

"Now you know what I've been going through all these years as an umpire. You're just getting a sample of it," he said.

Walking Example Uncle Jake Goldstein is a walking example of how life in the armed forces benefits a man.

Uncle Jake was a sort of roly-poly individual when he left civilian life six months ago. I am sure he was over 38 years old. Dead sure.

First he went to Keesler Field, Miss., and during his stay there he lost 35 pounds drilling under the sun.

"It was just like Miami—the sun," he said.

While at Keesler he had a chance to get a couple of days off and see Tennessee and Tulsa play in the Sugar Bowl.

"Tulsa was too small. They could pitch and catch, but that was about all," he said.

Uncle Jake is in town for a few days. He's stationed at Patterson Field, Dayton, Ohio, now. It's not far from Cincinnati.

"I'll get to see a few night baseball games," he said, happily.

He had gained back a few of the pounds lost under the Mississippi sun. But he still was 20 pounds off and a bit hard to recognize.

"Lighter you are the better you feel," he said, looking casually in our direction.

All-Star Bowling Match Slated for Tonight

Jenkins Rolls Jack Sheriff In 5-Game Set

Lawson and Lowry Appear in Doubles Feature of Red Cross Program.

The outstanding bowlers in the state of Georgia will perform for the benefit of the Red Cross tonight at 7:30 on the downtown duckpin lanes. Lou Jenkins, world's champion duckpin bowler for 1942; Jack Sheriff, Georgia state champion for 1943; W. F. Lowry, Georgia state champion, 1942, and Walter Lawson, national ranking bowler, will make up the participants who will bowl for the Great Mother, the Red Cross, which looks after the world in all types of disaster.

Red Cross workers will pass among the spectators, and take up a collection. This collection will be matched by the bowling alley dollar for dollar. The Constitution is sponsoring this event, because the bowlers of Atlanta have never failed to respond in a big way to all worthy causes. This was proven in the war bond drive for the new cruiser Atlanta which was sponsored by The Constitution for the bowlers of Atlanta. The Atlanta bowlers led the nation in bonds sold and bought by bowlers in any one city.

The doubles event will be first on the program for the evening. This will be a three-game match between Lou Jenkins and W. F. Lowry and Jack Sheriff and Walter Lawson. Sheriff and Lawson are the state doubles champions for 1943, and it is the opinion of the Atlanta bowlers that they will be hard to beat. All four participants shoot for every pin, which should make this a very close match, and a most interesting one for the spectators.

The singles match will follow immediately after the doubles. Jack Sheriff, ace competitive bowler and state champion, will match his ability against the nation's ranking bowler, Lieutenant Lou Jenkins, U. S. A., in a five-game match. These bowlers are the most colorful bowlers in this section of the country. Both men average better than 125, and it is expected that they will do much better in head-to-head competition. There will be plenty of seats for spectators, and also a fine array of bowlers who will bowl, and each one will use a different method of delivery.

Cruickshank Paces Field At Half Way

PINEHURST, N. C., March 24. (P)—Bobby Cruickshank, held to the lead in the North and South open golf championship today when he scored a 72 for his second round and a 36-hole total of 143. This gave him Bobby, of Richmond, Va., a two-stroke lead over Joe Kirkwood, of Philadelphia, whose two rounds are 72-73-145.

Gene Sarazen, of Brookfield, Conn., and Johnny Farrell, of Balcon, N. J., tied for third with cards of 147. To Sarazen this was a sad return, for he soared one over par on the final three holes of this second round to finish with a 73 when he had hoped for a 70.

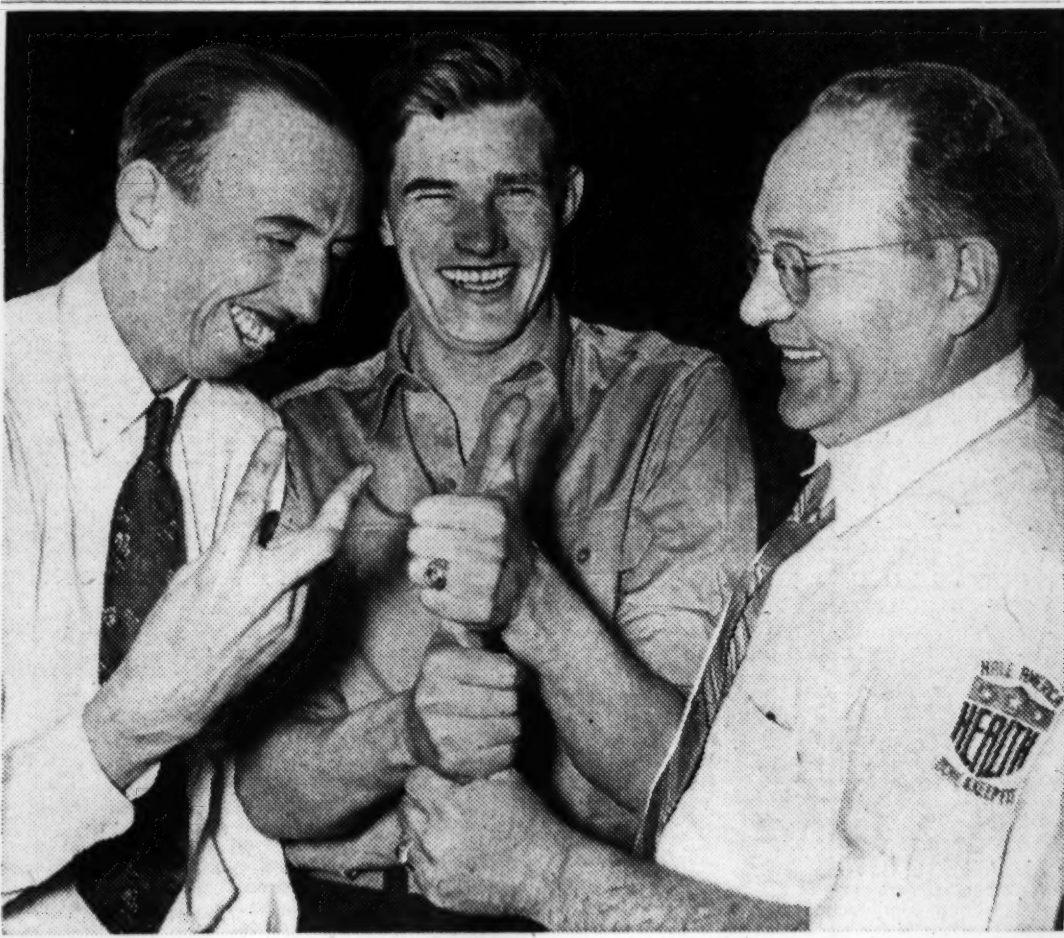

Sarazen, a Connecticut farmer, went to the Pinehurst dairy after the golf and milked a cow. He wanted to get in some war work along with his golf. Gene operates a large farm in Brookfield and can milk cows with the best farmers in his county.

Cruickshank played the first nine today in 34, two under par. He went three over par on the home nine. He was bunkered at the long ten and took a six. He went one over at both short holes, missing the green at the fifteenth and three-putting seventeenth, where he had a chance for a deuce.

His card: Par 444 533 443-36
Cruickshank 444 443 443-34
Patterson 443 444 336-72
Cruickshank in 444 444 444-38-72

James T. Hunter, of North Adams, Mass., led the amateurs with 76-75-151. The best score returned by a man in uniform for the first half of the championship was made by Private Ronnie Williams, of Camp Butler, N. C., a Detroit amateur. He had 82-77-159.

The final two rounds will be played tomorrow for the $2,000 in war bonds.

Agents Cracking Down On Game Violations

Parker Smith and Walker Herrod Apprehend Out-of-Season Dove Hunters on Baited Field in Bulloch County.

Some Georgia hunters do not yet realize that the era of lawlessness and lack of game law enforcement in Georgia has come to an end.

Last week charges filed before the United States commissioner accused Henry S. Blitch, Fred G. Blitch, Roy Smith and Paul E. Nesmith, all of Statesboro, of shooting doves out of season. The violators were apprehended in Bulloch county March 20, more than two and one-half months after the season on this game bird had closed. The field was heavily baited with wheat.

U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service records show that the doves in this section of the state are nesting at this time of the year, and that every dove killed after the parent birds have made nests and started rearing their young, will mean at least two and possibly four or six doves less in the fall and winter crop.

Federal officers making the arrest were Parker Smith and Walker Herrod.

DePaul Trounces Dartmouth, 46-35

NEW YORK, March 24. (P)—Paced by elongated John Mikan, DePaul, of Chicago, soundly trounced Dartmouth, 46 to 35, to enter the finals of the National Collegiate A. A. Eastern Regional basketball championships before a crowd of 16,000 at Madison Square Garden tonight.

Mikan, six-foot, eight-inch center, dropped in 20 points as the midwesterners throttled the eastern league champions' high-scoring trio of George Munroe, Bob Myers and Jim Olsen.

Walco Five Beaten In Consolation Tilt

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., March 24.—The Walco sextet of Atlanta, Ga., lost again today, bowing out of the consolation bracket of the National Women's A. A. U. basketball tournament here to the Nashville Business College, 21 to 17. The teams were never more than four points apart throughout the game.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., March 24.—Elizabeth Paradise was again the star of the Walcos as they downed Pittsburgh, 27 to 16, in the first round of the consolation bracket of the national A. A. U. women's basketball tournament here today. She made five field goals and four free throws.

Butts Curtails Grid Practice To Light Togs

ATHENS, Ga., March 24.—After sending his charges through three days of workouts in full equipment, Coach Wally Butts announced today that the rest of Georgia's four-week spring practice session would consist of work in shorts to keep the Bulldogs in shape.

"Since the enlisted reserve was called it is impossible for us to go on with spring practice as usual," Coach Butts said. "Instead we will have the boys out each day in shorts to keep them in shape. We have only 26 boys on hand and many of them are likely to be called any time; so there is no need for them to feel all brused up now. However each athlete will be required to work out daily," he continued.

The Army enlisted reserve, which was called the first of the week, got Charlie Trippi, Joe Tereshinski, Bob Poss, several other varsity men, and large group of last year's fresh squad. It has been hoped that the reserve would not be called, at least until June. But the orders were for the men to report around the sixth of April. Georgia began spring practice Monday.

Yanks, Brooklyn, Giants in Benefit

NEW YORK, March 24. (P)—The New York Yankees will meet the Brooklyn Dodgers and the New York Giants will tangle with the winner in the exhibition baseball double-header to be played at the Yankee Stadium April 14 for the benefit of the Civilian Defense volunteer organization. In event of rain the double bill will be postponed until April 16.

The lineup for the two games was decided by lot, with Leo Bondy representing the Giants, Ed Barrow the Yanks and John McDonald the Dodgers.

Penn Coach Is Laboring

PHILADELPHIA, March 24. (P)—George Munger, University of Pennsylvania football coach, used to get his hands smeary scooping up dirt on Franklin field. Now he smears them with grease in a war plant part-time job that pays him 60 cents an hour.

"Boy, am I looking forward to pay day," grinned Munger today at the suburban Wayne Iron Works.

He went to work two weeks ago and now feels as if "I am doing something toward the war effort."

"This is what I work on," he explained, holding out two steel tie-rods, each about two feet long. "My job is to thread these."

Garbed in grease-stained trousers, overall jacket, heavy shoes and a high, long-peaked engineers' cap, Munger reports daily at 7 a. m. He works until noon, then goes to Franklin field at 1:30 for his football duties.

"I go home tired every night," Munger declared. "And I'm not worrying about football this fall, either. If things go bad I'll still have my job here."

Leading Teams in American Hard Hit

Yanks, Browns, Red Sox Need Some Key Aid

Rizzetto, DiMaggio Are Chief N.Y. Losses, Williams, Pesky Gone.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo., March 24.—(P)—Military service has played no favorites with the top three teams of the American League, taking the star shortstop and the heaviest-hitting outfielder from each of them without discrimination.

The New York Yankees must find replacements for "Scooter" Phil Rizzetto and Jolting Joe DiMaggio, the Boston Red Sox for Johnny Pesky and League-leader Ted Williams and the St. Louis Browns for Vernon Stephens and Walt Judnich.

SEWELL CONCERNED.

It's hard to say which has the most difficult problem. But what Managers Joe McCarthy, of the Yanks, and Joe Cronin, of the Sox, do about their respective situations isn't of much concern down here at the Browns' spring training camp, where Manager Luke Sewell has plenty of his own troubles to worry about.

The Browns had entertained pennant hopes until Judnich, the team's only .300 hitter, was inducted into the Army, and Stephens, second to Pesky as the most valuable rookie last year, was reclassified 1-A. He has not reported at camp and presumably is in Long Beach, Cal., awaiting the call to arms.

Stephens' absence presents an opportunity for Mark Christman, who came to the Browns in a deal with the Detroit Tigers, but who spent the past three seasons with Toledo. Regarded as a light hitter, he changed his batting stance last year and wound up with a respectable average of .276.

Right now, Christman is "the man for the job." For one thing, he is the only man. Rookie Floyd Baker, who batted .326 with San Antonio, is a holdout, and Bobby Dillinger, who hit .305 with Toledo, takes his Army physical examination April 8.

CLIFT MISSING.

Third Baseman Harland Clift still has not reported and Sewell has been forced to travel along with four infielders—George McQuinn at first, Don Heffner at second, Christman at short, and Don Gutteridge at third, a position the speedster once played with the Cardinals.

The Browns' outfield setup is complicated by the fact that Glenn McQuillen is in 1-A and may not be around long. Chet Laabs, Mike Charkat and Tony Criscola are other holdovers from last year's team and there are two additions—veteran Mike Kreivich, signed as a free agent, and Rookie Milt Byrnes.

Whirlaway To Run In Phoenix Feature

LEXINGTON, Ky., March 24.—(P)—Warren Wright's Whirlaway, the world's leading money-winning horse, tops a list of 18 eligibles nominated for the Phoenix Handicap, feature of Keeneland's first day of racing at Churchill Downs, Louisville, on Saturday, April 10. The list of nominees for the $2,500-added handicap, was announced by the Keeneland office here today.

JOHNNY MARCHES IN—Johnny Mize, of Demorest, New York Giant first baseman, marches with a soldier to the building where examination started to determine his fitness for service at Jefferson Barracks, Mo.

Mize Takes Physical, But Results Unknown

ST. LOUIS, March 24.—(P)—Johnny Mize, the New York Giants' first baseman, took his examination at Jefferson Barracks today for possible induction into the armed forces, but officers at the induction center said the results of his tests would not be known before tomorrow.

And until the results are known no decision will be made on his acceptance or rejection. Mize started through the mill late in the morning and the examination was thorough.

During the day he met Ken Heintzelman, Pittsburgh Pirates pitcher who passed his physical a week ago and today entered upon active service, and Emmett Mueller, former Philly infielder, who has been in the Army for some time.

Mize is 30 years old and married, but has no children. He makes his home in St. Louis. For six years he was a St. Louis Cardinal and during that stretch in 1930—he led the National League in batting with a .349 average.

POP SUCCEEDS SON. SARASOTA, Fla., March 24.—(P)—E. W. Harbert, golf professional at the Bobby Jones course here, will leave about April 1 to become pro at the Battle Creek, Mich., club, as successor to his son, Melvin (Chick) Harbert, who has reported to the Army Air Corps at Holland, Mich., for training as an instructor.

York Smashes Homer, Tigers Rip Rookies, 6-2

Out, Pleased With Progress, Orders Game for Today; Red Sox Venture Outdoors for 20 Minutes.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., March 24.—(P)—Rudy York smashed a long homer and Young Dick Wakefield belted a 380-foot triple today as the regulars defeated the yanigans, 6 to 2, in the Detroit Tigers' first intrasquad game.

Hal Manders and Roy Henshaw held the yanigans in check as York and Wakefield connected off Paul (Dizzy) Trout and Hal Newhouse.

The Tigers counted two more casualties in Pitcher Hal White, who may be out 10 days with a back injury, and Outfielder Roger Cramer, who hurt his hand. In addition, General Manager Jack Zeller has gone to Rochester, Minn., for medical treatment and probably won't be in camp at all.

OTT HIGHLY PLEASED. LAKEWOOD, N. J., March 24.—(P)—At the conclusion of the New York Giants' three-hour workout under a comparatively warm sun today, Manager Mel Ott was so impressed with the condition of most of the players that he ordered a six-inning intrasquad game for tomorrow.

Four young pitchers will work three innings each. They are Hugh East, a Jersey City farmhand; Ken Trinkle, who came up from Baltimore; Bill Voiselle, with Oklahoma City last season, and Bill Sayles, obtained from the Louisville Colonels last year.

CARD SQUADS TIE, 7-7. CAIRO, Ill., March 24.—(P)—With their squad evenly divided, the St. Louis Cardinals played their second straight practice game today, going nine innings, but the score again was a tie, 7-7.

Rookie George Valore scored on a double steal with the knotting run. Walker Cooper, shaping up as the best catcher in the major leagues, hit two singles, a double and a triple.

BOSOX VENTURE OUTDOORS. MEDFORD, Mass., March 24.—Ten hardy members of the Boston Red Sox ventured outdoors today and worked out for 20 minutes before the sun peeked out from behind a heavy cloud before heading inside to the warmth of the Tufts College gymnasium.

Manager Joe Cronin shipped his five outfielders outdoors and had them shagging drives. The Red Sox also had Coach Frank Shellenback and Tommy Daly, others were Pitcher "Lefty" Olsen, who limbered up their arms while Catcher Bill Denny and Coach Larry Woodall did the receiving.

The entire squad has reported with the exception of Red Sox pitcher Doerr and Pitcher Oscar Judd and Yank Terry. All three were reported today as en route to Boston.

HIGBIE TESTS ARM. BEAR MOUNTAIN, N. Y., March 24.—Kirby Higbie, Brooklyn Dodger pitcher who has come up with a mysterious kink in his throwing arm, took an early start today on the sidelines in an effort to iron out the trouble.

The veteran Johnny "Lefty" Woodall, who has been in the Army for some time, continued to take turns on first base in the absence of Dolph Camargo. When the big, burly Yankee comes back, he will continue their rivalry for a regular job in center field.

MCCARTHY SEEKS SPEED. ASBURY PARK, N. J., March 24.—With the missing this year, Manager Joe McCarthy apparently plans to make use of all the speed he can get in his lineup to help offset the loss.

He has been looking for new shortstops, new shortstop, the go-ahead signal as far as running is concerned, and the speed men who can drive 73 bases in 15 attempts for Newark last season, is plotting to give American League catchers fits.

JO JO REPORTS TO A'S. WILMINGTON, Del., March 24.—Trainer Jim Tadey, of the Philadelphia Athletics, today reported that the stand-out, "if some good, more's better." Mindful of what the St. Louis Cards did last year after forced feeding of Vitamin B-1, Tadey is loading up his A's with the vitamin.

New arrivals in camp today were Roberto Estelle, the clouting Cuban just obtained from Washington; Jo Jo White, former Detroit outfielder; Dick Diehl, regular first baseman Johnny Weiss, up from Buffalo, and Bruce Konopka, rookie first baseman. The latter brought word he's 1-A in the draft.

LINE DRIVE HITS BECK. HERSCHEY, Pa., March 24.—The Phillies declared their spring training camp officially opened in the traditional manner today when Pitcher Walter (Boom Boom) Beck became the first injury victim. Nailed in the knee by a line drive off Danny Murtagh's bat, his injury was painful but not serious.

Beck joined two other chuckers, Johnny Podgajson, on the sick list. Both have colds. Johnson took advantage of his temporary idleness to issue a pronouncement that he thinks this will be a pitcher's year. Most of the good hitters are in the armed services, he said, and "it's going to be heaven."

REDS PREP FOR WAVES. BLOOMINGTON, Ind., March 24.—Manager Bill McKechnie of the Cincinnati Reds, had everybody throwing today in preparation for an intra-squad game Saturday for the benefit of a contingent of WAVES training at Indiana University here.

The team got outside in the afternoon for an indoor session in the morning.

COLLEGE PARK, Md., March 24.—(AP)—For the first time today College Park took on the appearance of a big league training camp. The Washington Senators practiced outdoors with infielders and outfielders working out with the pitchers and catchers.

Mickey Vernon, first baseman who had been wrangling over salary matters, showed up but arrived too late for the workout.

Manager Ossie Blugie said he was

Brutal Bandit Gets 20 Years On Five Counts

J. D. Leach, Who Slugged Victim, 69, Quails as State Asks Death.

J. D. Leach could dish out punishment to his victims in true gang style, but proved a piker when it came to taking it.

Arraigned yesterday before a jury and Judge Edgar E. Pomeroy, of Fulton superior court, on charges of robbery, Leach quailed when he heard the prosecutor demand the death penalty.

According to the evidence, Leach, member of a gang which committed a series of robberies in Atlanta, struck 69-year-old P. H. Johnson on the back of the head with a blunt instrument as Johnson was locking the door of his liquor store at 1215 Spring street, N. W., last February 16.

As Johnson turned, according to the record, Leach struck him another blow on the forehead. Because of this and because he was charged with using a machinegun in another robbery, Prosecutor J. R. Parham demanded the extreme penalty.

Leach, whose long police record shows him a veteran of many prisons, winced at the thought and doubtless also mindful that the pardon racket is no longer functioning, conferred with his attorney. The result was that Leach withdrew his case from the jury and entered a plea of guilty.

To this the prosecutor assented, all though continuing to ask the death penalty. Judge Pomeroy sentenced the prisoner to a minimum and maximum of 20 years on one count and gave him 10 years on four others, these to run concurrently with the first sentence.

Two other members of the gang, A. D. Samples and Jerry Thompson, pleaded guilty to the same charges. The former was given seven to ten years and the latter, because he was only 17, four to six years.

Among the robberies committed by the gang was that of Liggett's drug store, Luckie and Forsyth streets, on February 3. According to the police, the gang seized H. C. Hughes, a Liggett employee, on Columbia avenue as he was going home, dragged him into their car and took him back to the store, forcing him to unlock the safe and hand them $879.22.

Bell Plant Acquires Plot of Adjoining Land. For use in enlargement of the Bell bomber plant, an order permitting condemnation of six acres of land adjoining the plant's property was issued in federal court yesterday.

District engineers explained it was necessary for the plant to own certain extents of land surrounding the building, and the new acreage was acquired for that purpose.

Annie Morris, Hardy Richardson, Annie Richardson and Will Payton, all of Marietta, were listed as apparent owners of the property taken.

Holland Attacks Game Law Change. FORT MYERS, Fla., March 24.—(P)—The proposal to suspend the game laws and kill wild deer, elk and antelope for food because of the meat shortage was attacked by Ray P. Holland, president of the American Game Association, as "a genuine double-cross to our men in service."

When these men come back from the war they will want to hunt and fish on their vacations, and they should not find a country bare of game, Holland said. He compared acceptance of wild animal slaughtering to the enactment of prohibition in the absence of many service men during the last war.

BUCS BAT AROUND. MUNCIE, Ind., March 24.—(AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates wound up the first week of their spring training today with a lengthy batting practice. The 10 pitchers all took turns on the mound, several trying a few curves.

Frankie Friesch, working with the smallest Buccaneer squad ever to assemble at their camp, is having difficulty filling out two complete teams. He has six pitchers, Vince DiMaggio not yet having recovered due to his wife's illness. But for the infield it is necessary to fill in three vacancies with batterymen, even though Jim Russell, Ernie Sites and Jimmy Waddell can play infield or outfield.

LUKE APPLING ARRIVES. FRENCH LICK, Ind., March 24.—(AP)—Chicago's White Sox, who have been using any available pasturing or orchard for workouts since inaugurating spring training, finally got in their first batting and fielding drill today—on a diamond out in shape by their city rivals, the Cubs.

Adding to the joy of Manager Jimmy Dykes was the arrival of shortstop Luke Appling, and outfielders Wally Moses and Moose Solter. The only absentee now include catcher Tom Jordan and pitcher James Wade.

Baby in Well Calmly Munches Candy While Being Rescued

BRIGGSDALE, Colo., March 24.—(P)—A 20-month-old baby, who tumbled down a pipe into an abandoned 30-foot dry well, placidly munching candy bars while rescuers dug desperately for four and a half hours before reaching him.

The youngster, Clark Arthur Baldon, was unhurt except for a scratch on the forehead. He was with his mother, Mrs. Lawrence Baldon, and her brother, Corporal Roy Acola, on a sight-seeing walk around an old power plant yesterday when he toddled away and dropped into the 10-inch pipe.

Acola hurriedly mobilized some 50 men in this northern Colorado farming community. They dug in relays while an air pump sent a stream of fresh air down the pipe into the closed-in well. Candy bars were slid down into the child's dark prison.

"We found him sitting there with chocolate all over his face," said his mother.

110,000 Await Miss Jordan Ruling on Wage Is Dead at 71; In Canneries Funeral Today

Public hearing on a proposed 40 cents an hour minimum wage in the canned fruits and vegetables and related products industry that would directly affect approximately 110,000 workers in the United States and more than 400 cannery operators in this region was announced yesterday by James G. Johnson, regional director of the wage and hour and public contracts divisions of the Department of Labor.

The present minimum wage for workers in the canning industry is 30 cents per hour. The 10-cent-an-hour increase was recommended last week at a meeting in New York by an industry committee of 30 representatives of employers, employees, and the public. Arthur F. Raper, of Greensboro, was a public representative from Georgia at the meeting, at which time a vote was taken of 27 to 3 in favor of the wage increase.

The public hearing will be held in New York at a date yet to be announced.

Son in Hands Of Japanese, Parents Learn

Message Picked Up by Short Wave in Ohio Relayed to Atlanta.

Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Beck, of 1186 Ogletowne avenue, S. W., were informed yesterday—via Dayton, Ohio, and Oberlin, Pa.—that their son, Richard, is a prisoner of the Japanese government.

Picked up by short wave radio Sunday night by E. E. Alderman, of Dayton, and I. F. Bender, of Oberlin, a note written by Richard was read by a Japanese broadcaster from Tokyo, and sent to the Becks in Atlanta.

"Dear Mother," the note read, "I am well and receive good treatment. Do not worry. I am grateful for the courtesy shown me by the Japanese government for permitting this message. I hope you are well. I'm actually getting fat. I now weigh 135 pounds. Love to all, Richard."

According to Mrs. Beck, her son weighed approximately 140 pounds when he enlisted in the Army but, she added, he may have lost weight on Corregidor.

The last name on the message was not understood, but an address to Richard's aunt, George M. Smith, of Lake Forest, Ill., was given.

"Richard could not give our present address because he doesn't know where we are," his mother explained, "nor does he know that he has a 7-month-old baby brother, James."

This was the first word received from Beck, a private first class in the Army Air Corps, who was sent to the Philippines in September, 1941, his mother said, although his parents recognized a picture of him among a group of American soldiers captured by the Japs on Corregidor in the August 24 issue of Life magazine.

After attending high school in West Terre Haute, Ind., Beck was employed at a country club at Lake Forest, near Chicago, Ill., before enlisting in the Army. He was stationed in Hawaii before going to the Philippines.

Brittain Tells Of Tech Plans For Students

College Ready To Accommodate 900 Civilian Students, President Says.

Plans to accommodate 900 civilian students at Georgia Tech were announced yesterday by Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of the college, in a general statement on plans for the institution.

"We shall probably have assigned to Georgia Tech about 2,000 men under the 'Army and Navy program,' the statement said. 'In addition to these, we can accommodate 900 civilian students for whom we are planning to start regular terms July 5 and November 1.'

"Entrance requirements for civilian students remain unchanged. A student who is 16 years old and meets our entrance requirements as stated in the catalog may make application for admission in the usual way.

"There will be some necessary simplification and modification in some of our regular courses, and the number of students may be limited. Just how many applicants can be accepted will not be determined until plans for the Army and Navy programs are completed.

"Arrangements for housing students are not yet completed. An announcement of our completed plans for the summer will be made toward the end of April." After June, 1943, four groups of students will be enrolled at Tech, the statement said. These will be: (1) Army enlisted men (Army specialized training program A-12), (2) Navy enlisted men (Navy college training program V-12), (3) civilian students over 18 who are deferred by their draft boards, and (4) civilian students between 16 and 18 years old.

BENNING PARATROOPERS GREET EDEN—British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden is greeted by a group of Uncle Sam's Paratroopers at Fort Benning, where the British diplomat made an inspection tour yesterday. Eden, in the United States on a special mission, made a whirlwind tour of several military establishments in the south this week.

AT OFFICERS' SCHOOL. ALBANY, Ga., March 24.—Captain Arthur H. (Boots) Walters, son of J. Hilsman Walters, and former Albany high school and college football star, is attending the antiaircraft artillery school for officers at Camp Davis, N. C.

Eden Shows Much Interest In Ft. Benning

British Foreign Minister Tours Georgia Army Post.

FORT BENNING, Ga., March 24. (AP)—British Foreign Minister Anthony Eden toured this Army post today and displayed such lively interest in talking with officers and enlisted men that General George C. Marshall, U. S. Army chief of staff, had to urge him along several times to keep on schedule.

Dapper and buoyant, the Englishman stopped to inquire about many things he saw on his inspection. Once he jumped onto a parachute training platform and asked Private William McHugh, of Detroit, how he liked the school. Even later McHugh was so flustered he had difficulty spelling his name for visiting cameramen.

General Marshall and British Field Marshal Sir John Dill, chief of the British joint staff mission in the United States, accompanied Eden.

After witnessing an Infantry School demonstration, Eden told a class of officer candidates, "I want you to know that you should be proud because you are training to lead American soldiers."

"There is no higher or bigger job. Our folks at home in England are with you. We're proud to be with you and we'll see the war through to victory."

General Marshall told the class that reports coming back from Tunisia reflected credit on the Infantry School here.

Mme. Chiang To Be Greeted By Chinatown

SAN FRANCISCO, March 24.—(AP)—San Francisco's heavily populated Chinatown will be resplendent in holiday best tomorrow to welcome China's first lady, Mme. Chiang Kai-shek.

Great flying dragon kites, flags by the hundreds, tremendous quantities of flowers and banners from every archway and window proclaimed Chinatown's welcome for the frail little American-educated woman who is pleading for further material aid to her beleaguered homeland.

As her first official act, Mme. Chiang is to ride down narrow Grant avenue amongst her own people—about 17,000 of them—of San Francisco and from other sections of the far west as far away as Wyoming and Montana.

After the arrival tomorrow morning from Chicago, Mme. Chiang will start a busy schedule of speeches, dinners and receptions that will not end until Monday night.

Food Delivery to Allies Drops During January

WASHINGTON, March 24.—(AP) The Food Distribution Administration of the Agriculture Department reported today in delivering 447,000,000 pounds of foodstuffs and other agricultural commodities in January for shipment to Allied Nations. This was somewhat below the average monthly deliveries in 1942.

During the month, the FDA delivered 26,000,000 pounds for shipment to North Africa, including wheat, sugar, flour, evaporated milk and soap. It was the first month of substantial deliveries for movement to North Africa.

Ban on Coal Stoves To Be Lifted March 31

WASHINGTON, March 24.—(AP) Coal-burning stoves can be purchased for supplementary heating by almost anyone who needs one and has the price after March 30, the Office of Price Administration announced today.

Previously the stoves were rationed in those districts where fuel rationing is in effect. In announcing the relaxation of restrictions, OPA said these stoves may be purchased by "anyone who wishes to supplement central oil burning equipment for health and comfort in any essential living space, or working space essential to the war effort, or to public health, or to safety."

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE

Without Caramel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go
The liver should pour out about 2 pints of bile juice into your bowels every day. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food may not digest. It may just decay in the bowels. Then gas builds up your stomach. You get constipated. You feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.
I take those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these 2 pints of bile flowing freely to make you feel "rarin' to go." Get a package today. Take as directed. Effective in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. 10¢ and 50¢.
